Rent Boost Limit Cut

British Columbia's 10.6 per cent limit on rent increases is too high and will likely be lowered next year, Attorney General Alex Macdonald said today.

A report, expected next week, will recommend a more flexible system for rent controls with a standard allowable increase lower than the existing 10.6 per cent, he said.

Macdonald would not say what the new allowable increase will be but he expects it will be lower than the rent control guidelines set out in the federal government anti-inflation program.

The minister called reporters into his office this morning to tell them in response to the federal wage and price control program, B.C. would continue its own rent controls and its own jurisdiction over energy prices.

Meanwhile, federal Finance Minister Donald Macdonald warned that if B.C. premier Dave Barrett rejects the terms of the new anti-inflation act "the people of B.C. would be adversely affected." Following a morning cabinet session, in Ottawa, he indicated the government is still willing to make changes in the plan and the provinces will have a chance to suggest amendments at a federal-provincial finance ministers meeting next week. Alex Macdonald said his government's effort to keep down gasoline prices have saved British Columbians $12 to $15 million and he doesn't foresee allowing any further increases in gasoline prices in the near future.

Recent increases in the wellhead prices of natural gas, established by the B.C. Energy Board, are necessary as incentives to production in the north, said the attorney-general, so he does not expect the federal government will interfere in those increases.

B.C.'s system of requiring prior government approval for any increases in the prices of petroleum products will continue and is a better program than the federal government's new scheme.

Ottawa's program allows prices to rise and then calls for a review and possible roll backs which are difficult to enforce, he added.

A report is also being prepared on the possibility of provincial controls on the mark-up of gasoline at the retail or dealer level, but the government has no plans now to go beyond controlling wholesale prices of gas.

$212B BILL

OTTAWA (CP) — Cost of keeping consumers supplied with oil, natural gas, coal and electricity is expected to total $212 billion during the next 15 years, the federal energy department says.

Provision of additional electricity through nuclear plants, thermal-generating stations and hydroelectric projects probably will cost $110.9 billion, more than half the total spending.

POST OFFICE driver J. J. Shannon stopped at the McNeil and St. Patrick mailbox in Oak Bay at 11:30 a.m. Wednesday and found a cardboard box sitting nearby with a newspaper-wrapped skull inside. Oak Bay police have determined from UVic anthropologists that skull is likely Kwakiutl or Nootka and is about 150 to 200 years old. Cranium, held here by Cst. Bill Irwin, will be turned over to provincial archives. (Bill Halkett photo.)

Posties Sticking To 71% Demand

Times News Services

OTTAWA — A postal strike appeared inevitable today as leaders of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) announced plans to stick with their original demand for a 71-per-cent pay increase in a one-year contract.

Backed by apparently overwhelming support from the 22,000 CUPW members for a postal strike if negotiations fail, chief union negotiator Jean-Claude Parrot said he will attempt to return to the bargaining table "to get on with some real neogtiations this time." But if those negotiations fail, "there is no doubt we will have to use our right to strike."

Parrot's comments came after most CUPW locals voted heavily in support of the union executive's request for authority to call a walkout, if negotiators fail to make progress on the CUPW's initial demands.

"There have been no real negotiations up to now because the employers did not have any mandate," Parrot said.

He was referring to a July 8 internal memo between two post office negotiators with a list of items which are identified as negotiable or non-negotiable.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Wednesday that the anti-inflation review board must approve any post office contract settlements exceeding new federal wage guides.

The government's selective wage controls imposed earlier this week limit annual increases to a basic 10 per cent in the first year of a contract for more than four million workers, although the anti-inflation board is empowered to make exceptions in some cases.

The union has demanded a wage increase of 71 per cent over one year. It has rejected an increase of 38 per cent over 30 months as proposed in a conciliation board report and supported by Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey. If accepted, the recommendation would raise average hourly rates to $6.28 from $4.58, and add protection against increases in the cost of living.

The union's demand for an increase of 71 per cent would mean an hourly increase of $3.26 over one year.

Airline Seeking Order

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Air Canada will seek a court injunction against a planned one-day strike by members of the Canadian Airline Pilots Association.

The nation-wide walkout, set for Saturday, was organized to protest the federal government's policy of permitting bilingual air traffic control at five Quebec airports.

An Air Canada spokesman said purpose of the injunction is to avoid massive public inconvenience.

"We fail to see how the cause of safety could be advanced by the proposed strike. We also believe that the dispute shoull not be settled with a strike," Yves Pratte, Air Canada chairman.

In a related development, one airline has said it will dismiss any of its 149 pilots who take part in Saturday's walkout.

Jack Hughes, vice-president of Nordair, said the airline warned CALPA in a letter that any pilots who refuse to operate scheduled flights during the 24-hour walkout will be dismissed immediately.

In the letter, Nordair president R. G. Lefrancois called the walkout "irresponsible and illegal, and unnecessarily disruptive to our charter services."

Lefrancois also said CALPA would be responsible for any expenses incurred by Nordair as a result of the walkout.

Jail, Big Fines Back Controls

OTTAWA (CP) — Penalties for violating selected wage and price controls imposed by the government this week include jail terms of up to five years and fines of $10,000 or more, legislation tabled today in the Commons shows.

The legislation establishes the anti-inflation board that is to monitor the guides for acceptable price and income rises and also spells out the cost for offenders.

It says offenders are liable on summary conviction for fines of at least $200 and up to $10,000, or up to a two-year jail term, or both.

On conviction by indictment, offenders are liable to fines set by the court that must be at least $10,000 and imprisonment for five years.

Meanwhile an NDP MLA charged Wednesday supermarkets in Ontario and B.C. have raised their prices to anticipate wage increases that will not materialize because of the wage freeze.

Stuart Leggatt (NDP—New Westminster) observed that the anti-inflation policy provides for refunds to purchasers who have been gouged, but asked Finance Minister Donald Macdonald how these purchasers will be identified so they may get refunds.

"In other words," Leggatt asked, "how do you refund the price of a can of beans to people who have been gouged?"

The finance minister admitted there will be "a very considerable problem in that there are a great many articles of small value exchanging hands over a period of time." He said that every effort will be made to identify those entitled to refunds.

"But in that kind of situation, where the purchaser cannot be identified, the amount of overcharging will then be forwarded to the Crown," Macdonald added.

Some supermarket spokesmen in Vancouver admitted Tuesday to increasing their prices Monday night, following Prime Minister Trudeau's announcement of price and incomes controls.

They said, however, the alterations had been decided last Thursday and were not because of Trudeau's speech.

Marilyn Chilvers, of Canada Safeway Ltd., said some of the chain's stores had regular night crews working on Monday. She said they were stocking shelves and altering

Nixon Was Odd —Henry

Special to The Times

OTTAWA — The private table talk of Henry Kissinger reveals that the U.S. Secretary of State found Richard Nixon to be an "odd, artificial and unpleasant man."

Kissinger's comments, made at a private banquet held in his honor by External Affairs Minister Alan MacEachen, were picked up by a microphone that was to be used to transmit his after-dinner toast to reporters in another room.

The sound was accidentally turned on throughout the meal.

His former boss "barely governed" during the 18 months of the unfolding Watergate scandal which eventually forced him to resign, Kissinger said.

Kissinger had nice words for the Kennedy family, especially Jacqueline Onassis whom he said he likes and finds "sexy."

"Jackie is a hard woman who knows what she wants," Kissinger said.

Nixon, on the other hand, "was a very artificial man.

"In the sense that when he met somebody, he thought it out very carefully, so nothing was spontaneous. He didn't enjoy meeting people and people sensed it. And that made them uncomfortable.

"What I have never understood is how he became a politician. He really dislikes people. He hated to meet new people."

Kissinger also said that Nixon could never win over the hearts of Americans because he came across poorly on television.

MacEachen today telephoned a personal apology to Kissinger for the accidental bugging.

Back-to-Work Law Broken By Bakery, Board Rules

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Labor Relations Board ruled Wednesday that McGavin Toastmaster Ltd. contravened the provincial government's back-to-work legislation by failing to recall all union workers employed at its Mother Hubbard Bakery in Langley, near here.

The decision will also affect pulp and paper mills.

Paul Weiler, the board chairman, issued an interpretive ruling saying he assumed McGavin "will immediately move to comply" with the legislation — the Collective Bargaining Continuation Act — that last week ended four major labor disputes, including the Greater Vancouver food shutdown, for a 90-day cooling off period.

Weiler said in a written judgment he has not issued a formal order to this effect, but would do so if the Bakery and Confectionary Workers International Union, Local 468, formally applied for one.

Weiler's interpretation of the intent of the emergency legislation passed at a special session of the legislature was expected to affect other unions' complaints besides the bakery.

Pulp and paper unions ordered to end their three-month strike have made similar complaints regarding rehiring at some pulp and paper mills.

About 700 members of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada employed at the Canadian Cellulose Ltd. in Prince Rupert and 400 at the Rayonier plant at Woodfibre on Howe Sound have not been called back to work.

B.C. Rail has issued layoff notices, effective Friday, for 150 men in two shopcraft locals of the United Transportation Union.

The dispute over rehiring at the Langley Bakery led to a workers' sit-in Friday and Saturday, which was called off pending the board decision.

While ruling that McGavin contravened the emergency act, Weiler also said that the company could not be prevented from later laying off employees "for just and reasonable cause."

He said that the intent of the legislation was not just that a strike or lockout be ended.

"Instead the operations must be resumed to their original scope and extent; each of the employees must be called back to work; and all employees must resume the duties of their employment," said Weiler.

Couth? . . . Not Bloomin' Likely!

DURHAM, England (Reuter) — Every British citizen has the right to swear at a policeman and slam the door in his face, a judge ruled Wednesday.

The decision followed an appeal by Robert Bennett who swore and slammed the door on a policeman when he was asked to take his son to a police station.

Overturning a $10 magistrate's fine for obstructing a policeman in the execution of his duty, the judge said: "It seems to us this man was doing nothing more than exercising his British rights with characteristic British vulgarity."

Don't Talk, Just Smile . . . to Sell Social Credit

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Don't talk a lot but smile and look happy — that's the advice Social Credit head offices are giving their door-to-door canvassers.

A two-page memo outlining directions for Socred poll captains and their assistants tells workers how to handle homeowners when they canvass their assigned poll areas.

The memo, which appears to have been prepared several months ago, first advises the canvasser not to talk a lot. They should begin by offering a Socred brochure and asking the homeowner what he thinks of the provincial government.

"If they are socialists, they'll say they like the NDP and are satisfied with it. If so, don't argue, just say you appreciate their time and hope they'll read over your folder — and thanks a lot — go to next door."

But the response is more likely to be negative, said the memo, and the canvasser should then talk about his concern over the NDP and say:

"I want to ask you to join me — in the best investment you'll ever make — $5 for a four-year investment in freedom."

The memo is full of tips on how and when to canvass and on what to say when met with certain responses.

"Please greet everyone with a smile, and look happy. It's great to be Social Credit!!"

Canvassers are given a hint of what to say if asked what freedoms B.C. has lost under the NDP — "If you own a car, you no longer have freedom of choice — freedon to purchase your insurance from someone other than the government.

"If you own land, — you no longer have personal jurisdiction over that land. Many British Columbians are even being forced into bankruptcy because they cannot sell their land, their land is not productive, and they cannot borrow on their land."

The NDP is "the most inflationary government in Canada," said the memo and Premier Barrett has a salary of $52,000 plus $18,000 expenses, some of this tax free."

(Barrett actually has $20,000 in expenses but it is to cover travel expenses of his office).

The memo urges canvassers not to start before 9:30 a.m. or after 9 p.m. and says security-sealed apartments may be difficult to get into — "but if you reach the owner and explain you are on a mission for free enterprise, you'll get a good reception."

As a final note the directions say in some polls canvassers will find retail shops, industries and offices.

"Ask to see the manager and explain your cause.

"It is important that we call on everyone."

Back-to-Work Law Broken

He said it was not difficult to fathom the reason for the government's approach to the problem of controlling the major labor disputes.

Weiler said the legislation "is admittedly draconian" and said it removed from the unions for 90 days their main weapon for influencing employers when negotiations are at an impasse — the strike.

"The legislature concluded that the employers should not be given a discretion as to the pace at which they might reasonably resume operations and as to how many employees they felt they needed to use," Weiler said.

Only by sending all employees back to work "would there be clear and unmistakable evidence that the original labor-management dispute and work stoppage had been ended."

The company told the board it did not call back all employees "because its regular customers had stock-piled supplies from elsewhere as a consequence of the strike."

Weiler rejected the company's argument that the act be given a "broad interpretation in order to allow an employer to make these reasonable, economic judgments, in deciding on the pace at which operations should be resumed under the legislation."

Members of the bakers union, the meatcutters division of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers Union and the Retail Clerks Union closed 125 area supermarkets for a month before the legislation ordered them back to work.

The workers have rejected an increase of $1.30 an hour over terms ranging between 10 and 11½ months that would increase wages for general clerks to $7.25 an hour, meatcutters to $7.95 and bakers to $8.14.

Supermarket Price Hike

prices to those decided last Thursday for the opening of business this week.

She said prices on 82 items increased and those on 181 declined.

Shirley Brown, of Super-Valu, said the reasons for price changes at that chain were similar to those of Safeway.

"Our prices are controlled at head office and there would be no one here (when the speech was made) to issue that kind of order," she said.

B.C. Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich said today it's "very unlikely" the cabinet will decide before next week whether to launch an inquiry into food costs in B.C.

The agenda for cabinet's special meeting in Parksville Saturday will not leave room for discussion of a possible inquiry, he said, and it may be best to wait until after a meeting of finance minister's in Ottawa next week for clarification of the federal anti-inflation program.

Among other factors the cabinet will have to consider is a study of food costs already in progress by the B.C. Food Advisory Council.

Stupich said he has not seen the study which was prepared by a hired consultant and investigates the cost of food once it leaves the farm.

But a preliminary draft has been studied by department officials and the minister said it might make a further inquiry redundant.

The report, which should be completed by November, might also indicate where a more full scale inquiry with public hearings might probe.

Stupich repeated that the government has made no decision on whether a price review would be helpful and said again that the province may not have any power to act on its findings.

The main concern in proposing the study, he said, is that "we always hear that food prices are higher in B.C. than elsewhere and even if it just reassures us, maybe it's necessary."

"I've been trying to justify prices in the past, now perhaps we need more evidence."

In related developments—Treasury Board President Jean Chretien will issue directives prohibiting the use of first class air travel by federal public servants, suspending the normal schedule for replacement of departmental automobiles and ending the normal replacement of office furniture.

—Special phone numbers have been set aside for complaints or questions about the program at revenue department taxation offices in 28 major cities. Long-distance calls can be made free of charge by dialing the operator and asking for Zenith 0-4000.

—Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp said Wednesday the government may amend legislation designed to limit medical care cost increases to bring it in line with its new economic program.

—Employees in Calgary's essential services will strike if wage and price guidelines laid down by the federal government have not been withdrawn by Jan. 2. Jim Murrie, western regional director of the Canadian Union of Public Employees said Wednesday.

Murrie said following a meeting of Calgary CUPE members that the union intends to enlist support provincially and nationally to "break the guidelines wherever possible."

—Finance Minister Macdonald will introduce a bill in the Commons today authorizing the government to move ahead with its new anti-inflation program.

Debate is scheduled to open Friday. Commons rules restrict bills to routine first reading on the day of introduction.

—Jean-Luc Pepin, chairman of the anti-inflation review board, said at a press conference the plan needs voluntary support to make it work.

"If people don't want it to work, there will be 111 ways of getting around it," he said.

Asked about the negative union response, he suggested that it was "possibly a standard reaction—a bargaining position—but they will come around to saying 'yes'."

Basically, what the unions are being asked to accept is a 10 per cent ceiling on wage rises in th first year of a three-year program, which includes two per cent as a share in national productivity growth. Increases of six and four per cent before maximum two per cent productivity gains would be permitted in the next two years.

Stricter UIC Law Eyed

OTTAWA (CP) — A government move to tighten unemployment insurance eligibility may become even more severe, the Commons was told Wednesday.

Manpower Minister Robert Andras, replying to Lincoln Alexander (PC — Hamilton West), said a review is under way that may bring more changes.

Government House Leader Mitchell Sharp said a bill introduced earlier this year to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act now has priority as part of the anti-inflation program.

He told Gordon Fairweather (PC — Fundy-Royal) the government hopes to bring it through Parliament along with wage and price control legislation to be introduced today.

"There is a very high priority for the bill" Sharp said. Alexander noted that benefits paid in July were 60 per cent higher than for the same month in 1974. He asked whether Andras is considering relating the time a person actually works to the time for collection of benefits.

"When a decision is made I will place the information before the House." Andras said.

the weather

A fairly active disturbance is expected to pass through the lower mainland late this morning giving the chance of gale force winds to most southern waters. 'Without The Ghetto Stigma'

"A chance for kids to live without the ghetto stigma; a chance for people to be proud of the place they live in; to help each other; to instil confidence in our children who live in rented housing."

These are the basic goals of the newly formed Dogwood Executive Tenants' Association, a group made up of representatives from the provincial public housing complexes.

President Bill Smith of Victoria said the new group will present the views and ideas of tenants as a whole to the provincial Rental Housing Commission.

By June of next year there will be more than 10,500 public rental units on the Mainland and Interior with another 1,200 in the Victoria area.

Smith said the association hopes to promote better living conditions for themselves by helping the government solve present problems while at the same time encouraging the province to construct more low rental units.

"We're trying to promote this program without turning into a political force," added Smith.

Jack Smith (no relation) who is vice-president of the organization says that "through our experiences on the Island we found that the provincial housing commission does co-operate with us and we want to keep it that way."

Blanshard Courts was the government's first entry in the public housing field and it was through this project that others evolved.

Now they are smaller and scattered throughout a community.

"Blanshard is too big (184 families) and there are too many problems associated with such a big complex," said Bill Smith.

"In the small places (20 to 40 units) there is more control of the children and the tenants don't have that ghetto stigma that has surfaced in the larger complexes."

He pointed out that in the smaller units, people are more likely to help themselves.

"We want renters to have the feeling that it is their place they are living in and to look after it accordingly.

"If it needs a coat of paint, they should be willing to do the work if the paint is supplied. It's the little things that make a place theirs."

The next meeting of the Dogwood group will be Nov. 13 at 6 p.m. in the boardroom of the B.C. Housing Commission in Vancouver.

Rough Justice Not Good Enough

As the Trudeau administration's controls unfold it becomes increasingly obvious that this was a hastily thrown together package. Almost as an afterthought the government announced that cabinet ministers and other MPs would be hit by the $2,400 wage increase ceiling announced Monday. That means the prime minister's January pay increase will be only $2,400, just like all the other poor stiffs making a measly $30,000 or more per annum. That will not mollify people who remember the politicians voted themselves a fat 33 per cent increase last year.

The basic trouble with this incredibly complex plan is that it creates jealousies. Apparently all wage earners who fall under the controls are to be divided into three categories. Those who have signed fat two or three year contracts are, forgive the phrase, laughing. Others in the process of negotiating contracts such as the postal or pulp and paper workers will apparently be exempted from the controls. The third category, that is those people who have yet to bargain with their employers will be limited to the 10 per cent increase. Of course the federal government will try to be fair to all. But how many exceptions can be made to the rules before the whole work force becomes cynical about government controls?

On the other side it is unclear how Ottawa hopes to control prices or profits. Certainly it will pose a financial nightmare for the average businessman who will have to explain his actions chapter and verse. But are prices and profits going to be controlled with same zeal as wages and salaries? Much doubt exists in the public mind, and labor will point to the fact that business profits are up 12.4 per cent in the last quarter. Besides this apparent inequity the government has done nothing to control interest rates, mortgages, dividends, food prices or energy rates. Nor has Ottawa indicated any hard policies to stem government spending, other than cutting out first class air travel.

A glance at a few of the headlines in Wednesday's Times underlines the government's problems. One firm has reduced its mortgage interest rate from 12.25 to 12 per cent, as a response to the anti-inflation program. Such an altruistic action is not going to cause rejoicing in the streets where many people are looking for accommodation. B.C. gas consumers will pay an extra 12.1 per cent for natural gas Nov. 1 unless federal guidelines prevent it. Then we have other statements that Barrett may fight Ottawa and big unions plan to oppose controls. What the Trudeau administration fails to understand is that most Canadians are willing to forego their expectations if it is seen that everybody is in the same boat. But when they see themselves limited to a 10 per cent increase this year, while others such as B.C. Hydro workers can smugly sit back on a 40 per cent settlement over the next two years, the average Canadian begins to do a slow burn. If supermarket prices continue to rise over frozen wages anger will increase.

The tears in the package are evident only three days after we received it. At least one provincial government, a number of unions and many individual Canadians are counting the loopholes. Now that the legislation has been introduced the Trudeau administration should listen carefully to opposition critics and be prepared to amend this act before it receives royal assent. It still could work and it should be made to work. But "rough justice" isn't good enough. The country was promised a "just society." It deserves to get it.

War Measures Act Rethought

MONTREAL — On Oct. 16, 1970, about 13 hours after the War Measures Act was declared, the prime minister of Canada, in his seat in the House of Commons, having finished a speech about the "grave duty" needed in such troubled times, extended a thumb, raised a hand to his nose, and wiggled his fingers.

Pierre Trudeau then proceeded to put a thumb in each ear and wiggle the digits of each hand.

At the time, former prime minister John Diefenbaker was suggesting that the government could not be surprised about the existence of a revolutionary movement in Quebec and was about to propose that the Liberals withdraw the War Measure Act and bring in changes to the criminal code, a line of action Diefenbaker seemed to think was more reasonable than the wholesale removal of civil rights.

Perhap those wiggling fingers were just an expression of boyish, middle-aged zest for life, perhaps the nose was thumbed at an older man who appeared to be taking himself too seriously, and there was probably a great amount of self-confidence expressed in that flippant gesture.

But it is the kind of thing that stays in the back of one's mind, even if there was at the time a readiness to accept that the government was far more aware than the average citizen of the real threat of an apprehended insurrection, and was thus justified in throwing hundreds of people in jail and harassing hundreds more.

Conspiracy Cult

Most of us were willing to take the government at its word, particularly when John Turner, then justice minister, told us. "It is my hope that some day the full details of the intelligence upon which the government acted can be made public, because until that day comes the people of Canada will not be able to fully appreciate the course of action which has been taken by the government."

We are, of course, still waiting and the longer we wait, the more people begin to consider that the government had broader and less praiseworthy motives for the passage of the act. There is even what could be the beginnings of a cult along the lines of the one that developed in the United States about who really killed John F. Kennedy.

As with Kennedy, evidence has been brought to bear on our martyr, Pierre Laporte, which, while not detracting from his personal integrity, shows that some of his close associates made unfortunate errors in judgment.

More than one of Laporte's advisors maintained contact, according to the Quebec organized crime inquiry, with Montreal gangsters.

"Let's face it," a young federalist Montreal lawyer said the other day, "the kidnappers were found by normal police methods and procedures, but if the police at the time had been devoting most of their manpower to controlling demonstrations and meetings they wouldn't have been able to pursue those normal procedures which enabled them to finally find the FLQ."

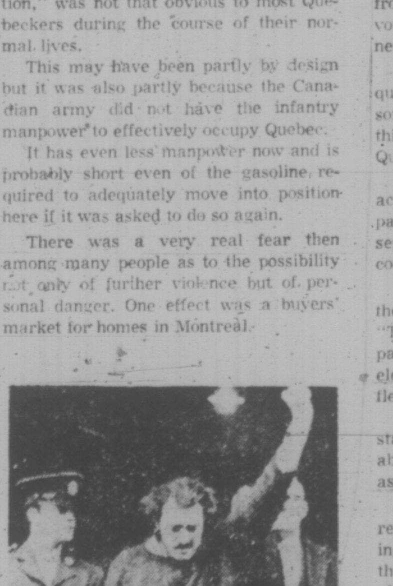
The real impact of the military's involvement was psychological.

In fact, what Quebec nationalists and leftists refer to as the "army of occupation," was not that obvious to most Quebeckers during the course of their normal lives.

This may have been partly by design but it was also partly because the Canadian army did not have the infantry manpower to effectively occupy Quebec.

It has even less manpower now and is probably short even of the gasoline required to adequately move into position here if it was asked to do so again.

There was a very real fear then among many people as to the possibility not only of further violence but of personal danger. One effect was a buyers' market for homes in Montreal.



PAUL ROSE

Important members of the provincial and federal governments mentioned a dangerous spread of attitudes here, a refusal by many to forthrightly condemn the actions of a group since described by La Presse publisher Roger Lemelin as "juvenile political delinquents."

With some justification, however, members of the Parti Quebecois still feel that when the federal and the Quebec governments moved, in Jean Marchand's words against "the expression of a narrow-minded and racist nationalism," they were aiming a psychological blow at the whole Quebec separatist movement.

If so, the politicians in power at the time appear to have miscalculated.

All their fuss ended up making them look a little ridiculous. Normal relations between English-Canadians and French-Canadians worsened and more weight was added to the idea that the federal government is ever-ready to crush at any excuse even peaceful proponents of Quebec rights.

This may have contributed to the increase in the Parti Quebecois support from less than a quarter of the popular vote in the 1970 provincial election to nearly a third in 1973.

This in turn may have strengthened a questionable belief now held even by some federal and provincial Liberals in this province about the inevitability of Quebec separation.

Thus at least one federal MP and two active members of the Quebec Liberal party have told this reporter: "If Quebec separates, it won't be the Parti Quebecois that does it."

Thus Claude Desrosiers, president of the Liberal party of Quebec, remarked: "There are two great traditions in our party. The first is that we like to win elections and the second is that we're flexible."

Thus Premier Robert Bourassa has started using Rene Levesque's idea about Quebec sovereignty in economic association with the rest of Canada.

Both men declare their willingness to remain in what Bourassa persists in calling "the Canadian common market," but the premier is willing to allow the federal government to maintain control of the armed forces.

African Style?

Bourassa has suggested that any change of Quebec sovereignty over which he presided would occur more smoothly than the "African-style independence" of the PQ."

Bourassa's government has also expressed a certain "narrow-minded and rascist nationalism."

Passed with the praiseworthy purpose of strengthening Canada's official minority, the Quebec language act attempts to do so in the less praiseworthy manner of placing discriminatory obstacles in the way of some citizens who wish to have closer ties with Canada's official majority.

All of which suggests that the War Measures Act may not be needed again to put down an apprehended insurrection of Quebec nationalists because the province may obtain some kind of national official status.

This may be one of the reasons why federal Solicitor-General Warren Allmand has finally said, albeit rather late in the day, that he is preparing a substitute for the War Measures Act, presumably along the lines of what Diefenbaker had in the back of his mind when he talked about changes to the Criminal Code five years ago.

CPR Replies

I feel it is time to correct some impressions arising from recent reports of cancellation of CP Rail's Victoria-Seattle barge service.

First, CP Rail had been chartering the barge service since 1969, not 1956 as reported. Prior to 1969, the barge company operated its own service, loading truckload traffic into U.S. rail cars at its waterfront property. There was no rail connection to the barge slip for island shippers.

During the six-year period in which we had been involved in the barge service, there were major changes in the economy and those changes are reflected in our decision that this is no longer a viable rail-barge service.

We can, however, provide very efficient service to Seattle and other U.S. points through our daily Nanaimo-Vancouver ferry operation. The frequency of our own operation — as compared with the twice-weekly Seattle barge — more than compensates for the extra distance that Victoria-area products must travel. We do not feel there will be any loss in quality of service.

The service now offered by CP Rail via Nanaimo and Vancouver provides uninterrupted rail connections for all present customers on the island. There is no need to transfer shipments to trucks for any part of the trip to U.S., as reported in the Times' stories.

In summary, this is a re-routing of present rail traffic with no significant change in handling and, for the largest percentage of the island traffic, no extra cost.

Our studies of present and potential barge traffic showed that a substantial freight rate increase — one of harmful proportions to our customers — would be necessary if the Victoria-Seattle barge service was to continue, and further, we would need the commitment of considerably more traffic which just isn't there. We could not justify presenting our customers with that type of cost increase while there is an efficient alternate-route available to them.—W. D. Roberts, General Manager, Marketing and Sales, CP Rail, Vancouver.

Sunday Petition

We have in our possession a petition which has been on our counters for one week, containing approximately 500 names. This petition requests a public plebiscite regarding store hours in the city of Victoria. While 500 people may not be a large percentage of the population of Victoria, it represents a large percentage of our customers. Many of those signing were against Sunday opening, but preferred to have this issue decided by referendum rather than by the method currently being employed. Therefore we feel the petition itself is not prejudiced.

We ourselves admit to prejudice in this regard. This store remains open on Sunday from 10 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. It is a family business. Many people of greater Victoria have expressed appreciation when they have realized that they could make purchases on a Sunday. There are, unfortunately, many people in this area and in other areas also who cannot afford the high price of professional repairmen at Sunday and holiday wages.

We feel that this by-law as it stands is both discriminatory and arbitrary.

May we ask who decides the priorities regarding Sunday purchases? We understand that small corner grocery stores will be allowed to sell pop, cookies, etc. Are these more a necessity than a can of paint?—H. E. Dunn, President, Hillside Hardware Ltd., 2680 Quadra Street.

Electric Streetcars

Regarding Municipal Affairs Minister, James Lorimer's decision to test German streetcars in Victoria, it does make considerable sense to return to electric transportation. We have been prisoners of the oil barons and their gluttonous corporations long enough.

If the oil bill for the operation of B.C. Hydro's diesel bus system is large now, think what it will be in the near future with successive price increases!

The decision to use the German super-streetcars is a particularly wise one. These noiseless, pollutionless vehicles can carry up to 250 passengers at one time, with one operator. The bus, in comparison, is a very labor-intensive vehicle, carrying under 100 passengers, and it is extremely noisy.

May I point out, the proposed use of streetcars for Victoria and Vancouver is not purely a local decision. It is happening world wide. Even Los Angeles, the city of freeways, is planning the implementation of light rail streetcars.

Electricity is produced from water power, a renewable resource, which the province has plenty of, and it does make sense to use it for public transportation.

If using electric streetcars will help reduce our country's dependence on dwindling oil supplies, I'm all for it. And with oil and gas shortages looming in the near future, whether physically or politically, we may be needing them sooner than you think.—Gary M. Woodley, 415 Linden Avenue.

OLD STREETCAR

Streetcars Desired

It was extremely gratifying to read that the provincial government intends bringing in a German-made street car for proposed tests. The department of municipal affairs is to be congratulated that they have the foresight to favor electric rail transit as the fastest and most efficient way to move people. The biggest goof of the 20th century was the wholesale scrapping of the economical and non-polluting street cars. Millions of dollars and years of research went into the development of electric street railways, culminating in the superb P.C.C. cars.

Anyone who is under the false impression that street cars are slow and noisy would be well advised to take a quick trip to Toronto where approximately 400 of these modern vehicles provide fast efficient service. Incidentally, Vancouver had about 40 of this same type car, which were scrapped. Also, back in the 1930s the mainland city operated a fleet of two-car trains, mostly on the Fraser-Kerrisdale run; which had a combined carrying capacity of 177 passengers. Think of the people who could be moved with a five-or-10-minute service!

An electric street railway system forms an integral part of any city, with its steel rails imbedded in the pavement and single overhead trolley wire. There is even an affinity between the electricity used to operate the cars and our domestic supply. The same "juice" that heats your morning coffee also takes you to work — although at much higher voltage! Street cars do not require block after downtown block of bus stops or parking space, and there are no diesel fumes to pollute the atmosphere.

It is somewhat ironical that in Victoria this sample car is to be displayed on Store Street, in the precise location where 27 years ago many Victoria cars were towed away to be destroyed. Also, where as a 10-year-old boy, I watched 10 of the new 380 type cars being unloaded from flat cars.

The writer has a large collection of color slides of Canadian, American and European streetcars, including one from Frankfurt, Germany, where this sample car is coming from. It is by no means a "Toonerville trolley," but a smart-looking modern vehicle of which any city could be proud.

Meanwhile, let's try and undo the damage by putting B.C. back on the tracks again — streetcar tracks! — Fred Hall, 2659 Fernwood Road.

Political Prestige

The recent back-to-work legislation passed by the provincial government is welcomed by all. I, too, support this type of action when the future of British Columbia is endangered, but it should have been passed sooner. I believe Barrett is simply using this issue for political prestige.

The unions support the NDP. Regardless of the current situation, the unions put the NDP in power and will help Barrett remain in power. If it would help win the next election for the NDP, do you suppose that the unions would sacrifice some public support in order to increase Mr. Barrett's public popularity? — Dennis D. Dorosz, Victoria.

Pollen Praised

I want to thank Mayor Pollen personally for having the intestinal fortitude and integrity to speak out for me, an ordinary citizen of Victoria.

I refer to his stand in the Memorial Arena the other night, and I agree with everything he reportedly said.

I deplore the present-day attitude towards all excesses, be they moral or physical. What has happened to sportsmanship? To moderation in all things? When is this laissez faire going to stop? How can we ignore what is happening to our children? Bad language, vandalism, drinking, drugs, assault, thieving — when is it going to end?

All thinking people can see where it is leading.

I wonder what those gallant men, to whom the Memorial Arena is dedicated, would say if they could see and hear what is being condoned today.

If more people expressed their disgust at what is happening, as the mayor did, surely some action could be taken. As the twig is bent, so shall the tree grow. — Hilary D. Young, 205 Wilson Street.

The Chief Reshapes His Spot in History

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — In 1966 I had the temerity and poor judgment to advise John Diefenbaker through a column that the time had come for him to quit the House of Commons. I argued that all of us should remember him at the height of his debating and argumentative powers, that lingering on as an embittered symbol of attitudes and events of the recent past would divide his own party and impede Robert Stanfield as party leader.

Recently I listened as Diefenbaker fielded phone calls from across the country on CBC radio's Cross-Country Checkup program. He was superb — a tour de force of humor, sagacity, courtesy and plain rapport with almost every caller. Further, he demonstrated a marvellous awareness of current issues, even those which he converted rather brutally to the furtherance of his opinions and quirks.

Many of those who honored him on his 80th birthday (and they were legion) could well do a retrospective assessment of the Chief as prime minister and wonder about several things.

Firstly, was he really as atrocious a prime minister as the Liberal and editoralist attacks of 1962 and 1963 proclaimed? Secondly, was the old-fashioned simplicity and directness of his populist performance as national leader such an anachronism? Thirdly, were all those hymns of praise to youth in political leadership which all of us indulged in from 1968 to 1972 worth much?

On this last point, I have the sneaky impression that Pierre Trudeau as prime minister seems an older and less revelant or inspiring man than John Diefenbaker does at this point in time.

Remember that the two most generalized charges against Diefenbaker as prime minister were that he ran a hay-wire, inexpert, unsure cabinet and governmental operation which had frazzled the corporate and financial community; and secondly, that he was completely out of touch with French Canada and so was fostering alienation there, even separatism.

To make rude comparisons between now and then, the federal juggernaut of spending and employees has more than doubled and few today seem much satisfied with the grip or expertise of the current government including Bay Street. As for French Canada despite "co-operative federalism" as pushed by Pearson and the French presence as symbolized by the Prime Minister, the two other wise men, bilingualism, etc., the forces in Quebec for more autonomy (Bourassa) or for separatism (Levesque) are surely stronger than they were when the Chief was defeated in 1963.

This crude interpretation of recent political history in favor of Diefenbaker can be much argued against. A good reason for putting it is tied to what I see him as representing: That is, an antidote to the Liberal interpretation of our politics.

You know the stuff: Lester Pearson as the warm, capable doer — the archetypal Canadian as bureaucrat and politician; or the Liberals as the only saviors of Confederation because of their special understanding of Quebec; or the Liberals as peculiarly but fortunately the combination of expertise and experience who know much better than anyone else how to run both government and economy whereas almost all other politicians (especially John Diefenbaker) and parties haven't the brains, the rationality and the great rapport with the splendid, capable mandarins of the Ottawa establishment.

By political longevity, a sustained involvement with people and issues, and a really stunning continuance of acuity and vigor, Diefenbaker is re-shaping his own place in history. And with his persistence comes the revenge that he's getting on those in his own party who ousted him.

As one of my Liberal acquaintances in Toronto chortled the other day: "The son of a gun is going to outlive and overshadow not only Pearson but Dalton Camp."

What I have always found most admirable in John Diefenbaker in politics is the time he gives to young people. I as an MP knew that I could bring one teenager or a score of them around and he'd find the minutes to talk with and encourage them in thinking politics and Canada.

Last spring I had the chance to measure personally the impact he made on one high school through a morning visit. Literally, he interested and excited most of the kids. I could also see what a reservoir of encouragement and hope the kids were to the Chief. In this committal there's a gift to the country quite unlike anything offered by any other politician in our history with the possible exception of Laurier.

Police Ethics Code Vetoed by Chiefs

By PETER DEELEY
Manchester Guardian

If the anti-torture draft code was one step forward in the field of high-minded declarations at the United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention which recently ended in Geneva, nobody made much fuss about two other "human rights charters" which failed to get anywhere.

It had been expected that the congress — attended by 99 nations — would come up with both the first international Code of Police Ethics (the dos and don'ts of a policeman's working life) and a revised and more widely accepted Standard Minimum rules for the Treatment of Prisoners. Both would probably have had more real application than the torture declaration which, as many delegates pointed out, was impossible to enforce where a torturer was carrying out his duties with the connivance of the State.

Faced with an ethical code which related directly to them, some policemen in some countries might have thought twice about illtreating a suspect, or taking a bribe: more universal acceptance (by countries like Britain) of up-dated rules for treating those in jail would almost certainly have improved conditions for prison inmates.

Finger of Suspicion

But both proposals trod on too many official toes and ran counter to too many penal and police policies to have a hope of general acceptance. While it is easy to take a dignified stand on such a broad issue as torture ("who dare oppose it?" asked one Indian delegate privately. "He would run the risk of having the finger of suspicion pointed at him.") the specific issue of the behavior of police and prison officers is another matter.

In effect, it was the police chiefs at the conference — and their ministry colleagues — who combined to reject the controversial idea that policemen should have the right, in some circumstances, to disobey orders; and that their ethical code should use the word torture. And it was government delegations who wrecked the attempt to change the Minimum Standard Rules that brought the debate to abortive anticlimax.

Where did the police code go wrong? In January a working group of police experts under a former head of academic studies at Bramshill Police College, Professor Philip John Stead, met outside Washington to formulate a draft code at the request of the UN General Assembly. It drew on a code currently used by the International Association of Police Chiefs, on statutes and regulations that govern police behavior in many countries, and on a study carried out by the American Bar Association.

Eventually this meeting produced a 10-point draft code which they put before the Geneva congress for its approval. It was later, privately, described by an Amnesty International representative as "A Boy Scout's charter" containing such anodyne phrases as "a police officer must be incorruptible" and "honesty in thought and deed should characterize a police officer's official and private life."

Meanwhile, an Amnesty conference attended by police delegates from a number of countries had taken place in The Hague that adopted its own alternative code which Holland agreed to sponsor at the Geneva congress.

The codes differed in two areas: use of the word "torture" and what someone at the congress later called "the Nuremburg doctrine as applied to law enforcement" — the question of carrying out the orders of a superior which might violate another person's basic human rights.

FBI and Yard Too

The "official" Warrenton code had confined itself to saying that "a police officer must never use more force than necessary to accomplish a legitimate purpose, nor may he ever subject anyone to any form of cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment."

The words "cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment" actually came to be the definition accepted by the congress to describe torture. But the Amnesty-inspired draft specially prohibited policemen to torture. And that was too much for the policemen present (they included Clarence Kelly, the FBI director and two Scotland Yard men) to swallow. An Australian detective told me: "We felt that very few policemen were involved in torture acts. That is the work of other government agencies in countries where it is practised."

But the idea that policemen should sometimes be able to disobey orders raised still more objection. The Hague declaration was clear: where a suspect's basic human rights were likely to be interfered with, a policeman "had a right to disobey or disregard any order . . . which was in clear and significant contradiction to basic and fundamental human rights."

It went on to say that policemen had a duty to disobey orders to execute, torture, or brutalize a person in their custody. They would also have the duty to protest against such orders.

This was going far beyond what the police chiefs could accept. Their view was best summed up by the chief of police of Peoria, Illinois, Allen Andres, who told me: "There is quite a trend towards police unionization these days and one could see this becoming the basis for some real disagreements between the man on the beat and his boss. It was quite a shocking proposal."

Now the United Nations is to be asked to set up another working party to draw up another police ethics code in a year's time. The forecasts are that it will run into exactly the same trouble.

UN Rules Ignored

The Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners were drawn up 20 years ago at the first UN crime congress. So far only a handful of nations recognize them. They relate to matters such as accommodation, hygiene, clothing and bedding, food and exercise, medical services, discipline and punishment.

One rule requires that all prisoners should be "made familiar" with the code. In some countries where prisoners cannot read, the rules are distributed in the form of comic strips.

RUSSELL BAKER

The Chicago Tribune has finally abandoned its long, lonely struggle to simplify English spelling and, so, another good cause bites the dust. Like so many good causes that fail, it was undertaken with the innocent notion that an evil easily identified is an evil easily corrected.

That English spelling is absurd and intolerable has long been obvious to all, and in the early innocence of the reform movement even thinkers as skeptical as George Bernard Shaw believed it easy to restore sense to the business.

In 1934 the Tribune entered the battle to end an "unspeakable offence to common sense" by decreeing that, henceforth, 80 words would be shortened and simplified whenever used in the paper.

"Through" became "thru." "Though" became "tho." "Thorough" became "thoro." Words like "epilogue" and "dialogue" were shortened to "epilog" and "dialog."

Recently the Tribune conceded defeat. Although "epilog" and "dialog" seemed to be gaining in acceptance, it announced, on balance it had "not made the grade in spelling class" and it did not want "to make any more trouble between Johnny and his teacher."

The difficulty about bringing sanity to English spelling arose from the reformers' excessively sensible assumption that words should be spelled as they sound. What they failed to allow for was the fact that English words sound different to different people.

"Tho" may sound like a sensible rendering of "though" in most American ears, but to many an Irish speaker, the correct spelling would be closer to "thoo." To Americans, the correct reformed spelling of "love" would be "luv," but to an English speaker from Liverpool it would be "loov."

To an American, "schedule" sounds like "skedyul." Or is it "skedyoo-ul"? To an educated Englishman, the proper spelling would be "shedyul."

Obviously, if we are going to start spelling English as it sounds we are rapidly going to divide it into several different languages, each of which will be barely decipherable by speakers of the others.

Within the United States, there would soon be a wide variety of written Englishes. "Thru" may be the correct rendinering of what "through" sounds like in Chicago, but in New York and New Jersey we would have an entirely different word — "throoo."

In Chicago, "thuh mayer" might be the only possible way to spell references to Mayor Daley, but in New York he would be spelled "da mare." In New York, I have a "muntly contrack" with a parking garage; in Washington I had a "munthly contracked."

Such a simple word as "yes" looks easy, but in Texas it would have to be spelled "yayess." Many Americans would recognize "hare" as the matter which grows on their heads, but not in the Ozarks. Down there it would have to be spelled "hayir," and the place where it growns, of course, is not a "hed" but a "hayid."

Can we at least agree on a President's English, an American counterpart to the ancient King's English, whose pronounciation, bearing the weight of authority, can be used for a standardized reformed speller? The principle seems unsound.

If we followed President Eisenhower's example, the sensible reformed spelling of "nuclear" would not be "newclear," as most Americans pronounce it, but "nukular."

Following President Kennedy, we could no longer spell Fidel Castro's homeland as "Kewbah," but would have to spell it "Cuber." Following President Johnson, we would not spell our own homeland "Ahmairuhka," but "Unmurrica." Following J. Edgar Hoover, our greatest authority on the doctrine of Karl Marx, we would have to spell it, not "komyunism," but "commonism." Following President Ford, we would all have to learn to spell "judg-uh-ment" every time we meant "judgement."

All this illustrates why it is much easier to denounce the absurdity of standard English spelling than it is to do anything about it. If c-o-u-g-h spells "cawf," then t-o-u-g-h ought to spell "tawf," and e-n-o-u-g-h ought to spell "enawf," and t-h-o-u-g-h ought to spell "thawf," and the fact that they don't proves that English spelling is insane.

On the other hand, if we try to do something sensible, like spelling words the way they sound, we are likely to end up unable to communicate with each other any better in writing than we do now in speech, and then we'd really have insanity to worry about.

Or, to put it more plainly, tho enough is not enawf, it is often better to quit while you're still behind.

Priory Purchase Approved At $200,000 'Bargain'

Two regional health agencies speedy approval Wednesday to purchase of the hospital and grounds at St. Mary's Priory for the "bargain price" of $200,000.

The purchase, with the provincial government paying 60 per cent and regional ratepayers the balance, opens the way for rebuilding and expanding the present antiquated 94-bed hospital to 150 beds for long-term care.

In addition, there were hints that some form of community health care centre, possibly providing limited energency and day care, may be added to the 10-acre site in Langford.

The Priory hospital was founded and has been operated by a Roman Catholic religious community, the Society of the Love of Jesus. A court action last year settled the question of control between two factions within the society, opening the way for the sale.

The Regional Hospial and Planning Commission learned Wednesday night that the province has completed negotiations for the hospital purchase at what commission member Jim Cumming described as a "bargain price."

Commissioner Art Young said that as well as an expanded hospital for care of the elderly, tentative plans for the site included the possibility of some kind of health centre and possibly accommodation for intermediate and personal care patients.

Earlier in the day, the Regional Hospital Board also approved the hospital's purchase in partnership with the province.

2 Killed As Peron Returns

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — Italian executive Reinaldo Dalbosco and his bodyguard were shot to death today by unidentified terrorists who intercepted their car in a Buenos Aires suburb, police said.

The identity of the murderers was not known but renegade leftists of the Peronist movement have threatened a bloodbath to disrupt the return to presidential duties of President Isabel Peron.

Terrorist bombs damaged two military facilities in residential Buenos Aires neighborhoods this morning, just hours after Mrs. Peron returned from a month's rest cure in the mountains.

Dalbosco, 40, and the bodyguard whose name was not immediately available were driving through the suburb of Adrogue, south of Buenos Aires, when their car was cut off by two other vehicles at 8:25 a.m., police said.

Several men got out of one of the autos blocking Dalbosco's path and opened fire with sub-machineguns before he or his companion could react, police said.

Region to Fix Sewers, Then Sue Developers

The Capital Regional Board will repair at least 16 sewage systems branded a health hazard in a subdivision alongside Esquimalt Lagoon—and then launch legal action to recover costs.

Delay in dealing with the problem led Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen to accuse regional board staff Wednesday of "maladministration."

The board learned that nothing had been done since it authorized emergency repairs on six faulty systems in the Block Bros. sub-division a year ago after regional health officer Allan Arneil termed them a health hazard.

Arneil said Wednesday that work had been delayed first by wet weather and then by a strike-lockout of civic workers. There was also the matter of determining where the problem lay before repairs were undertaken, he said.

The number of faulty systems has since climbed to 16 and there may be more with the onset of wet weather.

Problems involve a disposal system which uses a motor to activate effluent in a tank. The effluent is pumped form a second tank into a disposal field.

Motor breakdowns have been one problem. The board was told that effluent is coming to ground surface.

Arneil said repairs will cost $1,000 to $2,500 each.

Board chairman Jim Campbell said it isn't the intention of the board to bear the costs but to intercede because of the health hazard and bill those who are eventually identified as responsible.

The question of responsibility will likely have to be settled in the courts, the board was told.

PARK COST AID REQUEST DENIED

A request from Saanich for $20,000 to help offset increasing costs of mantaining Elk-Beaver Lake Park was turned down by the Capital Regional Board Wednesday.

In a chippy debate, the board did finally approve a review by the engineering department of operating costs for regional parks.

Elk-Beaver Lake Park is owned by the regional board but managed for it by Saanich under a 10-year agreement which commits Saanich to spend not less than $24,383 a year for management, maintenance, operation, control and improvement.

A parks committee report noted that Saanich is now spending about $75,000 as costs have inflated. Of this, $30,000 is for life guard service.

Leading the opposition to granting the $20,000 Victoria Ald. Alf Hood said such assistance would deal with only half the problem of regional park administration. He called for a study of all parks which are used by residents of the region.

The city has complained for years of high maintenance costs it faces in parks like Thetis Lake which it owns but are used by people living througout the district.

President,
Western Canada Hockey League,
Ste #12, 129 - 2nd Avenue North,
Saskatoon, Saskatchewan.

Dear Mr. Chynoweth:

The League you head has become an organization that condones, and even encourages, violence with the only apparent motivation being to make money. Young people, some of them not yet of legal age, are being taught to use hockey sticks as weapons and use their fists to respond to the slightest provocation. This is supposed to sell tickets.

That's not the way to play hockey......and that's not the way to handle yourself in daily life. Most of these young men soon will be faced with the challenges of being an adult. The instruction they are getting in the teams that make up your League is leading them towards lives of violence and teaching their young fans this is the normal way to act.

So far, all we have heard from the people who own and manage these teams and from the League itself are empty promises that brawling will be de-emphasized and hockey skills stressed. All talk and no action.

I am convinced that a strong statement by you, backed up with the power of your office, could return sportsmanship and skill to junior hockey. I am asking you as a citizen, a parent and a hockey fan to take that step now.

Sincerely,

Barry Kennard

Pulp Workers Will Ask A Better Deal Than IWA

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada will press for a better contract than the one tentatively agreed to by the International Woodworkers of America, PPWC president Reg Ginn said Wednesday.

He said he had talked with Finance Minister Donald Macdonald, who indicated the union would not be bound by wage and price guidelines brought down Monday by the Federal government.

"We will be pressing for negotiations in a week or so," said Ginn. "But it is ridiculous that we get a similar settlement with the IWA."

There is no comparison between the two unions except "that we both use logs," Ginn said.

"It's like trying to compare an industry that makes lines for railways and one that makes pots and pans," he said. The only similar things is that the primary product comes from a mine."

Art Gruntman of the Canadian Paperworkers Union said it looks as if his union will be exempt from the federal regulations. He has not had any discussions with federal officials, he said.

He agreed with Ginn that the IWA settlement should have no bearing on negotiations for the pulp workers.

"We would like to bargain our own agreement and not have someone else do it for us," he said.

Spokesmen for British Columbia's largest forest and pulp and paper companies, meanwhile, said Wednesday that new stocks of products are being produced and most operations will begin shipping them to buyers by the weekend.

The forest and pulp and paper industries which provide 50 cents of every $1 for the B.C. economy were crippled from July 16 to Oct. 9 due to the effects of a pulp workers' strike and economic layoffs.

Almost a week after the legislation came into effect both industry and union spokesmen agree that compliance with the law generally has been good and most workers have been recalled.

Jack Morris, a spokesman for Crofn Zellerbach, said "with minor exceptions almost everyone is back to work and operations are at pre-strike levels."

He said by the end of the week shipments to fill initial orders would be sent out.

"In considering the production and supply situations you have to consider the demand situation as well," said Morris.

BLACKS RIOT AT PRISON

TRENTON (UPI) — A classroom brawl between Black Muslim and other black inmates at New Jersey state prison today left two inmates dead and at least seven seriously injured.

The disturbance was quelled by guards at the fortress-like maximum security prison.

Most of the injured were treatel for stab wounds. Three inmates were sent to surgery at Mercer Medical Centre in critical condition with multiple stab wounds in the chest and stomach.

Electronic Squabble Halts Province Press

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Province published only one edition today, instead of the usual two, after a dispute with printers over technological change was resolved.

Copies of the morning newspaper were not off the presses until shortly before 7 a.m. about five hours after the second edition usually goes to press.

Officials of Pacific Press Ltd., which produces The Province and The Sun, met with members of the International Typographical Union and Ed Peck, labor relations board vice-chairman, and reached an agreement about 3 a.m.

Members of the ITU downed tools Wednesday after the composing room foreman fired a printer for refusing to handle copy from new electronic equipment.

In a front-page note to readers, publisher Paddy Sherman said that the company considers the work stoppage an illegal strike.

Sherman said that under the contract, which expires at midnight Oct. 31, "subject to stringent job safeguards, we have the right to introduce new printing technology."

"After preparation and discussions with the union dating back to February, the first article went live through the new video-display terminals late Wednesday," said Sherman's note.

"A printer refused to handle the finished material, and was dismissed, the only action possible under our contract language. Other printers immediately stopped working."

Sherman said that as a result of the discussions, "the printer was reinstated, work resumed, and the union agreed to handle the material earlier refused."

During discussions, other employees used the video-display terminals, which set tape by using a computer, "to prepare pages in cold type instead of the hot metal that has been used traditionally for setting news copy."

Sherman said The Province plans to be in full operation for Friday's edtion.

Union officials could not be reached for comment.

Greater Powers For CMHC Chief

Teron

OTTAWA (CP) — The Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. and the urban affairs department are being reorganized with CMHC president William Teron gaining greater authority.

An aide to Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson confirmed Wednesday that Teron will become acting secretary equivalent to deputy minister — of the urban affairs department while James MacNeill is commissioner-general of the United Nations conference on human settlements.

MacNeill will oversee preparations for the July, 1976, conference to be in Vancouver.

Teron, 42, will retain responsibility for CMHC but Ray Hession, CMHC executive vice-president, will become administrative head of the Crown corporation, the minister's aide said.

The CMHC president, a former house builder, will remain chairman of the corporation's executive committee, a policy-making body.

But day-to-day operations will be handled by Hession, a 35-year-old computer data expert who joined CMHC as executive-director of data and systems in April, 1974.

Teron, CMHC president since mid-1973, will have more power than MacNeill, whose sole responsibility was for the urban affairs department.

TWO-WAY BATTLE SEEN IN DUNCAN

DUNCAN — The mayoralty race here looks like a two-way battle between restaurant owner Michael Crosbie and incumbent Ken Pashkin when residents go to the polls, Nov. 15. Nominations, however, do not close until noon Oct. 27.

Crosbie, who has been in Duncan for three years, said his platform would stress the need for light industry in the Duncan area.

In the aldermanic race, for the first time in the community's 60-year history, a woman will run for council.

Mrs. Dorothy Sellars, a legal secretary and nine-year resident of Duncan, is going into politics because of the "need for orderly growth and development in the city."

There will be three vacant aldermanic seats, but two of the incumbents, aldermen Michael Coleman and John Homer are seeking re-election.

The third seat will be vacated by Ald. Lorne McLeod, who is not seeking another term.

January Opening For Centre

NANAIMO—The 3.5 million recreation centre, which houses an arena and swimming pool, is scheduled to go into use early in January.

The centre was approved by voters in a Nanaimo district referendum two years ago, after a similar vote had failed some time earlier.

Press Talk Progressing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Negotiations with union paper handlers are going smoothly, but that it's too early to tell if the Washington Post will reach agreements soon with its nine craft unions, executives of the paper said Wednesday.

Negotiations with seven of the unions, which are either striking the paper or observing picket lines, are being handled by the federal mediation and conciliation service in secret.

Talks with the union representing striking photoengravers were to begin today, while negotiations with the electricians' union began Wednesday.

Negotiations between The Post and pressmen, who started the strikes Oct. 1, were suspended, Oct. 9 when the mediator said no progress had been made and both sides had hardened their positions.

The vote by 1,300 editorial and commercial employees, directed the union leadersiip to call a strike "when and if they see fit." Members of the Guild unit at the New York Times are to take a strike authorization vote today. Contracts between the two papers, the guild and eight craft unions expired last March 30.

TUMOR RESEARCHERS SHARE NOBEL

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — Three Americans won the 1975 Nobel prize in medicine today for their discoveries of how tumor viruses affect cells. The prize-awarding body hailed their work as a "giant step" in cancer research.

The Caroline Institute, which awarded the prize, said the recipients were David Baltimore, 37, Howard Martin Temin, 41, and Renato Dulbecco, 61.

"They have found different effects and circumstances which cause cancer," said Prof. Peter Reichard, a member of the prize-awarding Nobel committee. "They have not come up with any new methods for treating cancer, but their discoveries are still considered a giant step in cancer research."

Baltimore is professor of biology and American Cancer Society professor of microbiology at the Centre for Cancer Research at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cambridge, Mass., but is now a visiting scientist at the Rockefeller University in New York City where he received his doctorate.

Temin is a professor of oncology (the study of tumors) at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis., where he works with the McArdle Laboratory of Cancer Research.

Dulbecco, 61, is currently a professor at the Imperial Cancer Research Fund Laboratory in London. Dulbecco is Italian-born but went to the United States in 1947 and was a fellow at the Salk Institute in San Diego, Calif., where he was listed as a virologist. He became an American citizen in 1953.

Touchy Cyprus File Kept by Kissinger

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger may be inviting a showdown with the House of Representatives intelligence committee by refusing to give the committee a subpoenaed memorandum that alleges mishandling of the Cyprus crisis by the United States.

Kissinger said at a news conference in Ottawa on Wednesday that he has offered to give the committee "a summary of views" on the Cyprus crisis handling.

But he said: "We will not submit documents even without names."

Chairman Otis Pike (Dem. — N.Y.) already had indicated doubts Kissinger would fully comply with the subpoena, saying the committee will take up Kissinger's response when Congress returns next Tuesday from a week-long Columbus Day recess.

The committee subpoenaed the memorandum in a dispute over a Kissinger directive prohibiting lower-level officials from telling Congress what recommendations they made for policy on such matters as the Cyprus crisis last year.

The memo sought by the committee was written by former state department Cyprus chief Thomas Boyatt, who told the committee that it shows what he considers to be U.S. mismanagement of the crisis.

Boyatt also told the committee he was instructed that under Kissinger's new directive he was not to testify on what his own recommendations had been during the crisis.

A former U.S. ambassador to Cyprus, Taylor Belcher, told the committee that operations officials tried unsuccessfully to get Kissinger to intervene and prevent the Greek coup that led to the crisis and subsequent conflict between Greece and Turkey.

A week after the coup, Turkey invaded Cyprus and eventually occupied 40 per cent of the island with 40,000 troops.

Kissinger said he is willing to testify "in substance" about junior officers' recommendations in such crises but he said he is not prepared to identify the officers who made the recommendations.

"It is essential for the integrity of the foreign service that they can make recommendations that are not subject to later public scrutiny," Kissinger said.

Earlier, he had told U.S. Embassy employees in Ottawa: "The professionalism and the non-political nature of the foreign service must be preserved."

Although there is no indication what action the committee might take on Kissinger's stance, it already has approved a resolution for the full House that would back the committee's right to enforce its subpoenas. The proposed resolution was drafted in an earlier dispute in which President Ford ordered intelligence agencies to ignore subpoenas from the committee.

Offshore Limit Backed

OTTAWA — U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger Wednesday offered support for Canada's attempts to extend its offshore territorial limits.

Kissinger told a news conference at the close of a 24-hour official visit here that "our views on the law of the sea are very similar."

However, he added that the United States "prefered that the regime of off-shore economic zones be set by international treaty and not by unilateral action."

The Canadian government has been pressured in recent months by various groups to unilaterally declare a 200-mile offshore territory mainly to protect east coast fisheries.

The government has said it prefers international negotiations but that unilateral action remained a "lively topic" if no agreement were forthcoming.

"We appreciate that Canada has resisted pressures to take unilateral action," Kissinger said. "We also have such pressures at home."

On another matter, Kissinger received assurances during his talk here that Canada would not reduce its military contribution to NATO or to North American defence.

Defence Minister James Richardson said he told the secretary Canada had every intention of living up to its international defence commitments to the limits of its capabilities.

Richardson made his remarks following a meeting between Kissinger and senior cabinet ministers, adding that the secretary had not solicited his reassurances.

Canada made a similar reassurance on military commitments to U.S. Defence Minister James Schlesinger when he visited here some weeks ago.

Kissinger was asked by a reporter to comment on claims by a "high ranking" NATO official that Canada's contributions to the alliance were "contemptible."

Kissinger said "I do not share these views" and "the problems of Atlantic defence are fully understood by Canada."

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Almost 200 years after he set sail in 1776 on his third and last voyage of exploration, which landed him on the west coast of Vancouver Island, Captain James Cook is coming back to B.C. — suffering the indignities of air freight.

A "heroic-scale" statue of the famous explorer, navigator and hydrographer is now being made in England and should be ready for air delivery by the end of November.

But Mayor Peter Pollen, who commissioned the work, said today he still doesn't know who will pay the estimated $10,000 cost, or exactly where Capt. Cook will take his prominent stand in the city.

"If I found out who was going to pay for these things before I did anything else, half the time they would never be ordered," he commented.

But the mayor obviously isn't too worried on that score. He said the provinical beautification agency, the Capital Improvement District Commission, has already recommended that the provincial government foot the bill.

And if the government doesn't, there are always private trusts, foundations, donations from public-spirited citizens or indeed city council."

City archivist Ainslie Helmcken, whose determined detective work enabled the commissioning, said the eight-foot, six-inch figure will be made of a type of "ersatz" bronze which looks like bronze and is extremely durable.

The figure is an exact replica of the Cook memorial in his home town of Whitby, Yorkshire, where Cook was apprenticed to a shipowner in 1746 nine years before he joined the Royal Navy, and where his famous ships Endeavour, Resolution, Adventure and Discovery were built.

Helmcken said it was fortunate that at the time he contacted the appropriate local authority, Scarborough council, for permission to have the copy made, it was already considering a similar request from the state of Alaska.

The original sculptor of the Whitby figure more than 100 years ago was Sir John Tweed, of the Royal Academy, and the man who will be making the copies is Surrey artist Derek Freeborn.

The material used, said the archivist, is a mixture of bonze powder and resin, reinforced with fibreglass. It's called polybronze, and Freeborn has given an assurance that the finished product "will be at least as strong as foundry-cast bronze."

Actual cost of the work will be around $7,000, and on top there will be air freight expenses and the cost of erecting a suitable base for the statue's first and last resting place.

Asked where that might be, Pollen quipped: "Initially we thought he might stand on the shoulders of Capt. Vancouver on top of the legislative buildings, symbolizing the way this government tramples all over everyone."

But the mayor said not only would that be historically inappropriate — Cook never roamed that far south in these waters — but also, perhaps, a "rather obscure part of the city" to erect such an important monument.

A more likely location, Pollen said, might be the "niche" in the Upper Causeway promenade. But if the alcove is chosen, care will be taken not to interfere with the commemorative maritime plaques already in place there.

Why a statue anyway?

"Cook, Vancouver and their like were great figures whose explorations opened up the Pacific," said Pollen.

"I think we should be ever mindful of the fact that, but for what these great men did, we wouldn't be here today."

In any case, he added, he for one is "not embarrassed to be associated with the British tradition of this country and this community."

Cook: "But are the natives friendly?"

$3.2M For X-Ray Equipment

It is going to cost $3.2 million to bring x-ray equipment at Victoria's two general hospitals up to standard over the next five years.

But the provincial government will provide 75 per cent of equipment costs and 60 per cent for renovations if it endorses the program approved by the Regional Hospital and Health Planning Commission Wednesday night.

The program would see $1,299,000 spent on radiology at Royal Jubilee Hospital and $1,899,00 at Victoria General Hospital.

John Clark, regional hospital planner, told the commission that technical committees are unanimous about updating of radiology at the hospitals being a matter of urgency.

Although the present Victoria General is scheduled to be eventually replaced by a new hospital, the commission noted that radiology equipment can be transferred to the new site.

In other business, the commission approved a master plan for development of both general hospitals, one more step which will ultimately see a co-ordinated construction program to renovate and expand them.

The master plan refines the roles each hospital has been assigned, set out in an earlier study.

We'll Take Our Medicine If It Promises a Cure

* * *

Item: More than a little bemused these past few days by the reactions to events that featured Peter Pollen, Dave Barrett and Pierre Trudeau.

I heard nothing but praise for Mayor Pollen whose reaction to a typically stupid, brutal, hockey game was a direct confrontation with the coach of the local team. I don't think for a minute that it will restore semi-professional or professional hockey to a fast, clean game, but the mayor, there in his official capacity, took the direct action that every sensible man or woman who has watched these games in the flesh or on the tube has felt like duplicating at some time or other.

There was all but unanimous praise, too, for Premier Barrett's decree to get the plants open and the men back to work for a cooling-off period. It can be argued persuasively, as many union leaders argued, that such legislation takes away the rights of collective bargaining from the labor movement, but, on reflection, it seemed immaterial in view of the fact that talk, itself, was getting nowhere. In any event the reaction seemed overwhelmingly that Davey had done the right thing.

These unrelated incidents seemed at least circumstantial evidence that there's a hunger for direct action, that the public will accept the strongest of medicines when the motivation is spontaneous or genuine. As it was in the Pollen episode so the Barrett move seemed a minor triumph in identification.

That seemed even truer in the television speech given by Prime Minister Trudeau. In watching it with a room-full of people of varying political hues and in sampling the later reaction I had the strong feeling that there was a terrible letdown of anti-climax. People were prepared, even ready to welcome, some hard action. When it came out as a compromise with the emphasis on voluntary restraints it seemed a weakness in a country that's eager to accept government strength.

Item: To watching tonight (Sunday) a high-budget Toronto series called Side-Street, my god-child being a member of the cast and very good in his role, but it does make you wonder what the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation is using for brains or a sensibility to the public taste.

This is just an awful show, a carbon-copy of the worst American-made violence programs, badly conceived, badly directed. This particular episode was called "Rape" and was both embarrassingly explicit and pointless in its dramatics.

You would think, being limited to the offerings of Channel Six, Victoria, that you might get used to this crap—they run Barretta, Ironside, Policewoman, Cannon, Hawaii Five-O and any other violence shows they can get their hands on—but the disgust only grows.

It was Channel Six, by the way, which passed up a preview of the Upstairs, Downstairs program which it will be running. Channel Two, Vancouver, carried this advance look at the highly-touted series, but Channel Six elected to give us Policewoman.

Item: Mighty pleased to read today in The Province—of all papers—a tribute to Bob Strachan who is leaving the hurly-burly of politics for the more serene pastures of London as our agent-general there.

I have known Bob through the 23 years of his public life, most of them in the role of a battling opposition that would discourage any lesser man, and, again, through those years when he set up the auto insurance plan and ran the ferries, both plagued by strikes that came from the kind of union people whose cause he had espoused for so long.

He has never been anything less than a courageous and dedicated man who deserves our thanks and gratitude.

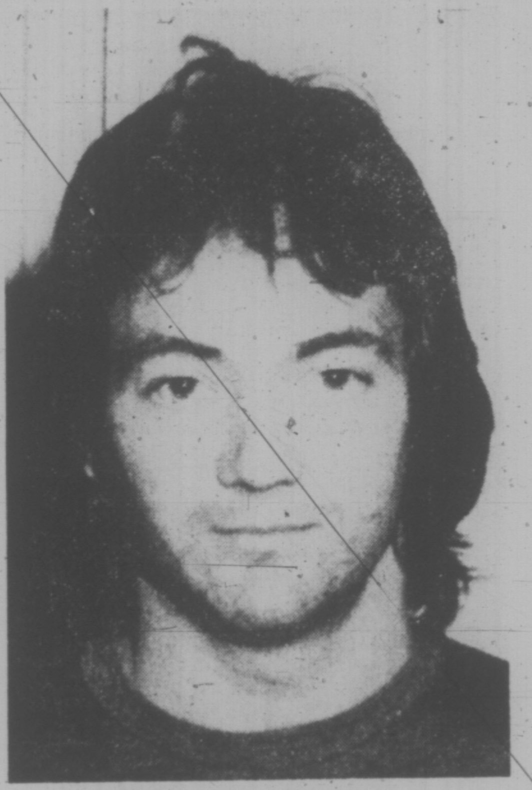
Item: Driving today from Nanaimo to Victoria with a man I much admire, yet we hadn't gone more than two miles before I realized that he is one of the world's worst drivers.

What frightened me most was the sudden realization that, while I go along supremely confident in the ability of the guy who is coming at me, it might very well be this guy, that the only hope for him is a safe-driving course and that he has no intention whatever of ever taking one.



Gordon Douglas Martin

MAN CHARGED AFTER CHASE

A 19-year-old Esquimalt man who led police on a high-speed chase which ended in an Oak Bay crash early today has been charged with three counts including criminal negligence and impaired driving.

John Mark Rogers, of 885 Dunsmuir was charged after Victoria city police pursued a vehicle at speeds up to 90 mph for two miles.

He was scheduled to appear in court today.

Rogers and passenger Jay Dancey, 18, of 1286 Holloway in Saanich, were treated for cuts and bruises and released from Royal Jubilee Hospital after the 1965 Mustang in which the two were riding sideswiped a tree at Orchard and Newport.

The chase began downtown near Pandora at 12:30 a.m.

Police pursued the car the wrong way down one-way Pandora then along Fort to Oak Bay Avenue to Newport.

Elusive Escaper Seen But Still On Loose

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Escaped prisoner Gordon Douglas Martin, seen twice since making a run early Wednesday from Wilkinson Road correction centre, was still at large today despite a wet night in the bush and a police dragnet.

Residents of the area northwest of the jail were warned to stay indoors and be wary of strangers until 23-year-old Martin, who has a history of violence, is recaptured.

Both sightings were by the same person, Mrs. Kay O'Connor, 1460 Charlton, who spotted the escaper first as she was driving on Charlton an hour after Martin escaped at 8:10 a.m. Wednesday.

"I couldn't believe it when I saw him again this morning," she said.

This time the man was walking briskly along the edge of Hastings, heading north, about one-third of a mile from where she saw him Wednesday.

"He turned and looked at me and I said, 'It's him again. I think he may have recognized me."

The man apparently had been holed up during overnight rainfall. His green institutional trousers were dry although mudcaked, Mrs. O'Connor said.

He had discarded his green shirt before she saw him on Carlton Wednesday morning, but overnight had acquired a too-large ski-type quilted jacket, blue in color.

"He was walking as fast as he could possibly walk, just off the edge of the road," the woman said.

That was about 10 minutes before 9 as Mrs. O'Connor returned from driving her children to school.

Only a few minutes earlier, she had speculated the fugitive had "been in that bush all night;" indicating the rough undergrowth visible from her living room window.

She said there is an unoccupied house on the other side of the bush area where Martin could have been. There are also other houses and numerous farm outbuildings in the Granville-Charlton-Courtland area west of Interurban Road where police concentrated their search.

Heavy rain this morning hampered the work of RCMP tracking dog Aro, which followed up on Wednesday's search after Mrs. O'Connor reported seeing the escaper.

Police also used a helicopter to scan the fields and bush and had police cars spotted at commanding locations in a three square miles area.

The police dog found Martin's shirt off the end of Roy Road Wednesday afternoon, but there were no further positive leads until this morning, although there was a report Wednesday night of a man fitting Martin's description in the Munn Road area near Francis Park.

Saanich police Sgt. Bill Chisholm advised residents to keep cars locked and secure doors and windows of their homes.

"Leaving a car with keys in it is just an invitation," Chisholm said.

Martin is five feet, 11 inches tall, 160-170 pounds with ear-length light brown hair and brown eyes. He was to have appeared at Ladysmith today for preliminary hearing into charges of burglary and possession of stolen property.

Fourth Attempt By Heynsbroek

Victoria's tally of aldermanic candidates for the Nov. 15 municipal election rose to five Wednesday with the announcement by former contestant, Joyce Heynsbroek, that she will make her fourth bid for a seat on city council.

Mrs. Heynsbroek, a working nurse for 25 years, with five children, was defeated in two previous elections and one byelection. Last year she unsuccessfully sought election as a school trustee on the Greater Victoria school board.

Born in England, she came to Canada in 1960 and is a Canadian citizen.

In the five years she has lived in Victoria she says she has been actively involved in community life, and lists among her special interests, education, drug abuse and care of the aged.

Mrs. Heynsbroek said if elected to council she would like to help in special initiatives on housing, through all three levels of government.

"Housing is needed at all levels but where the pinch is felt most, of course, is at the low-income level."

She added that she has "no big quarrels" with the general direction taken by city council in recent years, but feels she can make a useful contribution.

Trustee 'Shilly-Shallying' Irks Parents

Greater Victoria school board officials today were accused of "shilly-shallying" on the future of Lampson street elementary school.

A parent spokesman, one of 30 who attended a lengthy meeting of the board's construction committee Wednesday, said parents will register their complaints at a press conference Saturday at the school and make it clear the school should remain open and funds spent to maintain it.

Una Collins said is has taken constant effort on the part of parents to have the school maintained "and it was only two or three years ago parents managed to get doors put on the boys' washrooms."

Crux of the issue is whether the board should cut off registration of new students next year, redirecting them to neighboring schools, or go ahead with additions to the school and maintenance.

Another proposal being considered is to have Lampson made a primary school with only Grades 1 to 3.

The meeting saw two trustees in favor of maintaining the school, one against expenditure of funds for maintenance and addition, and six undecided. Mrs. Collins said the meeting proved a reluctance on the part of the board to come to terms with the issue.

Trustees decided to delay a decision until additional information on population projections in the area — reported dropping by the administration, and increasing by the parents — is received.

Tenders on the $311,000 addition planned for a gymnasium change rooms and administration area will be opened today and provide the board with more information on which to base a decision, trustees decided.

Assistant board superintendent Dr. John Wiens said today a decision on whether to cancel tenders for the addition must be made within 15 days. It is expected the issue could come up at Monday night's board meeting.

Bids opend today were described by Wiens as much higher than expected.

Lowest base bid for addition and renovation of the building was submitted by Herb Bate Ltd. at $679,970. Other bids were from Hunter Construction at $697,324 and H. E. Fowler and Sons at $759,504.

Bids did not include extensive prices quoted for improvements to lighting, fire alarms and electrical systems.

They will be referred to the school board for consideration.

Wrestled for Rifle After Wounding, Court Told

Warren John "Buzz' Long testified before a B.C. Supreme Court jury today that his wife entered his room shortly after he went to bed May 11 and shot him.

Long said his wife, Ivy Marie, opened his bedroom door, flipped on a light, swung a sporting rifle towards him and simultaneously fired it.

Mrs. Long, a 48-year-old mother of three and married to her husband for 26 years, has been charged with attempted murder. Her trial before Mr. Justice Davie Fulton started Tuesday. (See earlier story on Page 43.)

Long said he was shocked by the shot, got out of bed and rushed across the hallway to another bedroom where he saw his wife attempting to reload the rifle.

He said he wrestled the gun out of her hands, shook the ammunition out of it and went into the kitchen area to phone for police.

While attempting to dial, he said, his wife grabbed hold of the receiver and tore the phone off the wall.

He said he took the rifle and went out a basement door, through the garage to a neighbor's place to summon help.

Long said that earlier in the day he had gone to Vancouver to visit his mother and had arrived home shortly after 11 p.m. He said when he arrived home, his wife was sitting in the living room watching television and that after a while, he noticed she was "sobbing heavily."

She didn't say anything, he testified, and he watched television for about a half hour and then went to bed.

He said his wife had told him then she had found interest in someone else. The affair carried on until December, 1973, he said, when the man she was going with left her.

Long admitted that during the same period he was going with the other man's wife and that divorce proceedings had been started by both parties.

He said that from the summer of 1974 his marriage had deteriorated and that since January of this year he started spending weekends at the other woman's place.

He and his wife wanted a friendly settlement and she agreed to the divorce and wanted to remain in their home at 3841 Epsom until she could make other arrangements.

In testimony heard Wednesday Dr. Glen Ashmead said he had treated both Mrs. Long and her husband at the emergency ward at Royal Jubilee early in the morning of May 12.

Industrial Issues Losing Ground

Industrial issues continued to lose ground in light mid-afternoon trading on the Toronto stock market today but base metals and western oils made moderate gains.

Analysts said negative reaction to the federal government's control package was driving stocks down despite broad advances on Wall Street.

The industrial index was off .59 to 175.44. Golds rose .98 to 303.64, base metals .25 to 73.98 and western oils .40 to 189.58.

New York

The stock market posted a broad gain today, encouraged by a new sign of a more stimulative monetary policy at the U.S. federal reserve board.

Trading was fairly active.

Late Wednesday, the reserve board announced it was lowering to one per cent from three per cent the amount of reserves member banks must hold to support time deposits.

Such a move has the effect of freeing additional funds for use in the banking system and that, in theory, tends to push interest rates down and stimulate economic activity.

Interest rates in both the bond and short-term money markets registered declines today.

Eastman Kodak rose 2⅛ to $102⅜ on the 14-per-cent third-quarter earnings gain reported by the company at the close Wednesday.

Higher quarterly profits also benefited Honeywell, up 1 at $32⅞, and Munsingwear, 1⅜ higher at $14⅞.

Xerox, which listed a nine-per-cent decline in quarterly earnings from continuing operations, lost 1⅛ to $60⅝.

Montreal

Prices were mixed and generally lower in moderate trading today on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Volume at 2:30 p.m. EDT was 372,100 shares compared with 423,100 shares traded at the same time Wednesday.

Alberta Gas Trunk Line fell ⅛ to $11, Algoma Steel ⅜ to $29⅝, International Nickel A 3 to $25¼ and Home Oil A ⅛ to $26⅞. Bell Canada rose ⅜ to $42⅛, Velcro Industries ⅛ to $7⅜ and Alcan Aluminium ⅛ to $20⅞.

EARLY GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Oilseeds and rye picked up strength and feed grains hovered near previous close levels in moderate trading at the close today on the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange.

Rapeseed was the strongest grain on the board with increases of as much as 13½ cents. Feed grains were mixed.

Wednesday's volume of trade was 1,817,000 bushels of barley, 1,188,000 of rapeseed, 983,000 or rye, 927,000 of oats, 339,000 of feed wheat, 135,000 of flax and nil of Montreal corn.

Fireplace No Longer Luxury

TORONTO (CP) — The once lowly fireplace has become a star overnight, says Sam McCullough, 42, general manager of Selkirk Metalbestos, one of the largest fireplace manufacturers in Canada.

"The fireplace market in Canada is less than a decade old," he said in an interview. "Yet in this short span of time, it has grown from a meagre beginning to become a major industry on the Canadain building and renovation scene."

Selkirik, which has plants in the Ontario centre of Brockville, Oshawa and Toronto, has forecast sales next year of $11 million compared with $5 million four years ago.

McCullough said the energy crisis has been a boon for his firm because people began buying fireplaces as an alternative heating unit against fuel shortages. It means that a fireplace is no longer a luxury, but a necessary "functional heating unit."

McCullough's own firm has helped make fireplaces more popular with its new, prefabricated, self-contained units that use a steel rather than a masonry-built chimeny. He said steel chimneys are more efficient, more easily installed and less costly.

Selkirk's share of the fireplace market has grown 500 per cent in the last three years in competition with three Canadian and five United States manufacturers.

Selkirk-made and designed fireplaces also are sold in Europe and Australia.

The company moved into Australia only this year and did $80,000 worth of business in a joint venture with Morgan Heating and Cooling Ltd. of Melbourne.

"They (Morgan) feel that within five years, we can build up a $2-million market in Australia," McCullough said.

Under the deal with Morgan, the company will make a profit on parts it ships to Australia and "we'll get six per cent in royalities on everything they make under licence from us.

Selkirk will provide its foreign markets with parts as it has the precision tooling to do the job more efficiently and at less cost.

Eight of Wallace Murray's plants are in Canada, five in Ontario.

The parent U.S. firm also owns and operates the Simonds cutting tool plants at Avrida and Granby in Quebec, and the Schwitzer plant in Stratford, Ont.

Grainmen Fined

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — One of the world's largest grain dealers, Bunge Corp. of New York, was fined $10,000 after pleading no contest to a charge of conspiring to steal grain from customers. The government had charged Bunge with cheating foreign buyers of vast amounts of grain during 12 years of short-weighting at the firm's grain elevators in Destrehan, La., and Galveston, Tex.

Japan Trade Deficit First in 17 Years

TOKYO (Reuter) — Japan had a foreign-trade deficit of $1.018 billion during the first half of this fiscal year, with both exports and imports down on 1974—the first such decline in 17 years—preliminary figures show.

The trade deficit was smaller than the $3.605 billion in the corresponding six months of 1974, because imports fell faster than exports, said the finance ministry's figures covering April to September.

Exports totalled $27.415 billion, a decline of 4.4 per cent from $28.689 billion a year ago, while imports amounted to $28.433 billion, a drop of 12 per cent from $32.295 billion.

Exports to the United States, the European Common Market countries and Latin America declined heavily but those to the Middle East and Communist countries increased.

Imports from all areas dropped, but the decline was particularly heavy in imports from the Common Market and Southeast Asia.

$4.5M Loss Predicted for CP Air

VANCOUVER (CP) — CP Air is struggling with stormy economic conditions and may be forced into a loss position, says president Jack Gilmer.

Gilmer said the loss will amount to $3.5 million or $4.5 million.

The wholly-owned subsidiary of Canadian Pacific had a net income of $2.4 million in 1974 and $4.2 million in 1973, however, the current economic climate doesn't seem to agree with airlines.

Air Canada lost $9.2 million last year and as forecast a loss as high as $25 million this year. Pan Am lost $82 million last year.

CP Air has not rushed into purchasing newer and bigger planes.

"We have been inclined to wait for the development of a market before we commit ourselves to the purchase of equipment," said Gilmer. "Some carriers prefer to purchase at an earlier stage. "It can be costly if their hopes are not realized as quickly as hoped."

Because costs have been rising faster than revenues and government regulations, Ian Gray, vice-president of technical services, has been assigned the job of shrinking CP Air from its current 7,600 employees.

He said he doesn't know how many employees will go and although "there are bound to be some layoffs" most of the shrinkage will come through attrition.

Fortunately, the airline is not saddled with an aging fleet. The earliest it will have to replace some of its carriers in 1981 when its five DC-843s will have to go because their Rolls Royce engines cannot be modified to accommodate noise regulations.

Gilmer says because of CP Air's projected loss this year he is not putting a high priority on the China route and a public stock offering.

The China route is bogged down at the senior government level, Gilmer said, and that "isn't causing us any grief at all.

"It's going to be a loss leader, so in a period of loss we don't want to compound it."

Gilmer said total revenue is up 25 per cent so far this year but "the last time I looked at expenses, they were up 31 to 33 so that the situation is still deteriorating despite a tremendous yield in both traffic and yield."

In 1972, when the average cost per gallon was 17 cents, CP Air spent $128.5 million on fuel, or 11.6 per cent of its total expenditures; this year the average cost per gallon is up to 47.5 cents and the airline expects to spend $76.4 million on it, or 22 per cent of its total expenditures.

Fuel is the most notorious rising expense of the airlines but Gilmer said "even if fuel had remained static, we would still be in a hell of a lot of trouble."

Landing in Sydney, Australia, now costs 80 per cent more than in 1972 ($2,485 compared with $1,029).

Margaret McClung Citizen of Year

Citizen of year trophy awarded

Margaret McClung, recently retired administrator of the G. R. Pearkes Clinic, Wednesday was named citizen of the year by Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

The award was presented in Royal Jubilee Hospital where she is a patient.

Always active in community affairs, she was a founding member of the Queen Alexandra Solarium's Junior League in 1939 and helped to form the Cerebral Palsy Association of Lower Vancouver Island that later developed into the G. R. Pearkes Clinic.

Mrs. McClung is the daughter-in-law of Nellie McClung and for a time served as personal secretary to the well-known author.

Margaret McClung has been active in Liberal party activities since her arrival as a young bride in Victoria in 1937.

She helped to found the Lady Laurier Club of Oak Bay and was president of the Liberal association for lower Vancouver Island.

South Viet Refugees Sail Home

AGANA, Guam (UPI) — More than 1,500 cheering South Vietnamese refugees sailed for home today despite the apparent reluctance of the Communist government to accept them.

The South Vietnamese ship Thuong Tin, used to take fleeing refugees to Guam last spring, left Agana this afternoon with 1,546 would-be repatriates on board.

The refugees cheered from the decks as the ship's last line was cast off. A North Vietnamese flag flew from the stern mast and many of the refugees stood at attention.

The vessel, facing stormy waters in the Philippine Sea, left without the approval of Saigon's Provisional Revolutionary Government and against the advice of the United Nations Committee on Refugees.

The Thuong Tin was expected to pass Mindinao in the southern Philippines within four days. A tropical storm 600 miles east of the Philippines was moving toward the region at 16 miles an hour.

U.S. officials on Guam said American vessels would assist the Thuong Tin if an emergency develops at sea. But the United States did not provide an escort for the ship.

The captain and crew of about 60 — all South Vietnamese refugees — are considered qualified seamen, but have relatively little experience in long-range voyages.

Almost all of the repatriates had been on Guam since May when some 130,000 refugees arrived from South Vietnam following the April 30 Communist takeover of Saigon.

Labor Blamed for Breakdown Leading to Wage Guidelines

Labor must bear the major responsibility for the "abject failure" of free collective bargaining that resulted in the imposed wage and price guidelines, B.C. Chamber of Commerce president Bert Price said in Victoria Wednesday.

He said the guidelines would have to be retained until inflationary expectations had cooled enough to make collective bargaining work once again.

Price told the annual meeting of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce at The Empress that labor was engaged in a destructive game of leapfrog with one worker trying for $20,000 per year and the next one trying for $25,000.

He said unions had to take the major responsibility for this trend and it would also have a key role in determining the success or failure of the wage and price guidelines.

As far as management is concerned, it approves the guidelines but hopes they will not be needed for more than six months.

"Realistically we expect it will take more than six months before the guidelines can be removed but we are against the principle of government intervention in the economy and we hope the guidelines will only be needed for six months."

Price said that while unions were the main culprits in the failure of free collective bargaining, they were not alone. Also to blame, he said, were governments with their tremendous growth rates and high wage increases.

In addition, some companies have also been at fault awarding wage increases above a reasonable level.

Price said that while management approves the guidelines in principle at this time, there may be problems later when profit levels come under pressure.

"The question then could be: When will these restraints be removed?"

He said he didn't blame miners for being angry about working for $5.55 an hour when checkout clerks at supermarkets turned down $7.35 an hour and food service workers rejected $8.41.

When the wage structure went out of kilter in this way, outside action by the government became necessary, he said.

Victoria Chamber president Jack Hutchins, in a short address to the meeting, congratulated the federal government for bringing in the wage and price guidelines. The chamber has been campaigning for this policy since 1972, he said.

The chamber is mailing 6,000 letters to prospective members in Greater Victoria to begin its annual membership drive.

The meeting was told that for the fiscal year ended June 30th total Victoria chamber revenue was $64,541 and expenses totalled $58,234, leaving a net balance of $6,307.

In the previous year, revenues had totalled $57,964 and spending hit $47,399 for a net balance of $10,565.

The chamber collected $42,889 in membership fees, up from $39,832. Salaries and other employee benefits totalled $39,341, up from $30,558.

10 Killed at Hustings

LAHORE (Reuter) — At least 10 persons were killed and 50 injured Wednesday when Pakistani police used tear gas to break up a big political rally.

The police used the gas after two men were caught trying to release deadly snakes among the crowd of up to 60,000 persons.

Three of the dead were killed by tear gas shells. Others apparently were trampled to death when the frightened crowd stampeded.

Angry supporters of emerging opposition politician Ghulam Mustafa Khar, for whom the rally was held, pelted the police with stones and set fire to a police truck and a government jeep.

One man, caught with four snakes in a plastic bag on the stage from which Khar addressed the rally, said later that he and six other persons were hired by the government's security force to disrupt the meeting.

Winter Ferry Cuts Slash Overtime Bill

Reductions in B.C. Ferries' winter schedule will save the government $1.8 million, Transport Minister Carl Liden said Wednesday.

Fewer sailings and elimination of most employee overtime are the main components of the cost-saving, he said.

Earlier this year, former transport minister Bob Stranchan said the ferry service would likely lose about $25 million over the year but Liden still describes the cost saving as "a sizable step forward."

Until the winter of 1974, the ferries always went onto a reduced service schedule from Thanksgiving to the May 24 long weekend but last year a full hourly service was kept all through the winter.

But Liden said a study of traffic last fall and winter showed that both Vancouver Island routes were over-serviced during some parts of the day.

Advertising of the new schedules for the Tsawwassen-Swartz Bay and Nanaimo-Horseshoe Bay runs began Wednesday but travellers seeking information can phone 386-3431.

Liden said the most important change might prove to be the dropping of the 8 a.m. sailing from Tsawwassen and Swartz Bay everyday except Saturday.

The new Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen schedule, except for holidays, will be starting Monday:

—Monday to Thursday: ferries at 7 a.m., 9 a.m., 11 a.m., 1 p.m., 3 p.m., 4 p.m., 5 p.m., 6 p.m., 8 p.m, 10 p.m

—Friday and Sunday: ferries at 7 a.m., 9 a.m., 11 a.m., 1 p.m., 3 p.m., 4 p.m., 5 p.m., 6 p.m., 7 p.m., 8 p.m., 9 p.m., 10 p.m.

—Saturday: ferries at 7 a.m., 8 a.m., 9 a.m, 10 a.m, 11 a.m., 1 p.m., 3 p.m., 5 p.m., 7 p.m., 9 p.m.

Liden said he was unsure what progress has been made on the provincial government's study of a reservation system for the ferries but his initial reaction was not in favor of such a service.

Contractor Squabbles Delay Mirabel Opening

MONTREAL (CP) — Mirabel International Airport will not be ready for use Oct. 26 because of serious infighting between contractors and federal transport officials, said a spokesman for one of the 17 international airlines forced to move from Dorval.

The spokesman, who asked that this name not be used, said this infighting sometimes was caused by "personality clashes" between various personnel on the site 35 miles northwest of Montreal.

None of these problems delaying the opening of Mirabel should have occurred, he said.

He refused to provide details on the conflicts. However, another foreign airline executive confirmed the accusations and said the airlines had been told by the transport department "that if we complained to the press about this (the delay), we would be ordered to move in, even if the facilities were not ready."

Labor shortages also have resulted in facilities being not yet completed at the world's largest airport, the first airline spokesman said.

Contractors, he said, were unable to get enough electricians because they preferred to work at the 1976 Olympic Games site, "where they can earn more money and don't have to travel so far to work."

He also said there was a lack of high-voltage lines to various portions of the $600-million airport development.

This shortage was confirmed by Marcel Gagnon, regional manager for Hydro-Quebec in St. Jerome.

"We have installed lines capable of delivering 6,000 kilovolt ampers (KVA)," he said. "The airport requirement is for 12,000 KVA."

Gagnon said full power requirement will not be installed before the beginning of December because of labor problems. He did not say what the labor problems are.

"The main power shortage is in the cargo area," he said.

Meanwhile, airline representatives and transport officials were engaged in meetings Wednesday and scheduled to meet again today to discuss the issue.

Most of the 22 national and international airlines involved have said they expect the solution will be for airlines to vacate Dorval at different dates.

B. W. Torrell, chairman of an International Air Transport Association committe supervising the move from Dorval, said "the airlines can't all move in at the same time."

He expected it would take at least a month for all airlines to move from Dorval, which will be used only for domestic and North American flights.

Federal transport officials have refused to comment on the possibility of Mirabel's opening being delayed.

Officially, the airport was opened Oct. 4 by Prime Minister Trudeau but the facilities were not to be used until Oct. 26.

Airline officials said a delay will be costly because all the world's airlines already have written Mirabel into their schedules.

FORESTER APPOINTED

A long-time member of the B.C. Forest Service has been appointed assistant chief forester in charge of operations for the province.

Ralph Robbins replaces Wally Hughes, who retired last month. Robbins has worked for the service since 1951 and has been in Victoria since 1972.

FASTBUS SERVICE SPEEDED UP

Improvements in Greater Victoria bus service, including an expanded Douglas Street Fastbus, were announced Wednesday by Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer.

The Douglas Fastbus combines the Mayfair Shuttle and Douglas-Saanich routes with a service every 15 minutes between Royal Oak, Town and Country Shopping Centre, Mayfair Centre, downtown Victoria and Legislative Buildings.

A new Carey bus service will run every fifteen minutes between Royal Oak and the Town and Country Shopping Centre.

Sidney bus service wil also be upgraded through additional runs during the morning and afternoon rush hours.

The changes will come into effect Nov. 28 and Lorimer said he hopes public meetings can be held to obtain citizen views on transit needs in the area.

Tiant a Houdini on Boston Mound

The crafty Boston right-hander broke Cincinnati's home field spell with some sleight of hand Wednesday night in the fourth game of baseball's World Series.

Squirming out of more jams than a Houdini, Tiant tamed the Reds 5-4 with a courageous performance and led the Red Sox into a 2-2 tie in the best-of-seven series.

"The man has done the job all year long," said Boston manager Darrell Johnson, who will start Reggie Cleveland of Swift Current, Sask., against Cincinnati's Don Gullett in tonight's fifth game.

"He was out there at the end tonight, and he did the job again."

The Reds have been almost impossible to beat at home this year. They had a 67-17 record before Wednesday night's game.

At first, it looked as though they were going to continue their domination at Riverfront against Tiant.

Boston's star pitcher, who had shut out Cincinnati at Fenway Park in the series opener last Saturday, was obviously not himself with only three days' rest. The Reds gave the roaring Riverfront fans a lift with two quick runs off the chunky right-hander in the first inning.

"My breaking ball was not as good as it was in Boston," Tiant, stroking his famous Fu Manchu mustache, told the press later: "I used my fastball more tonight.

"Also, the mound is higher here than in Fenway Park. That bothered my control."

But the early Cincinnati runs didn't take the heart out of Tiant. If anything, he pitched with more heart as the game wore on.

Down 2-0 in the first, Boston didn't stay behind for long. The Sox chased Cincinnati lefthander Fred Norman with five runs in the fourth inning — and suddenly the Red Sox had a 5-2 lead.

Tiant was still struggling, though. In the Reds' half of the fourth, he gave up two runs. And Fisk thought for a moment that Tiant would be driven to shelter.

"I thought we lost him," said the catcher. "He just wasn't pitching a typical Luis Tiant game.

"He had better control in the opener at Fenway. His breaking ball just wasn't working."

Tiant worked out of the jam in the fourth. The right-hander also had nervous times in the fifth, gave up hits in the sixth and eighth and then found himself in big trouble in the ninth.

Tiant gave up a leadoff single to Cesar Geronimo and then a sacrifice bunt to Ed Armbrister that moved the potential tying run into scoring position.

Working with extreme care to the dangerous Pete Rose, Tiant walked him to put men on first and second with one out. Then Ken Griffey hit one of Tiant's pitches way back in centre field, and Fred Lynn raced back to make a catch over his head.

Then Tiant faced Joe Morgan, the Cincinnati sparkplug who was the Reds' hero Tuesday night, and got him on a harmless pop-up to Carl Yastrzemski at first.

Doubles by Griffey and Johnny Bench in the first inning produced two Cincinnati runs before the Red Sox came back with their game-breaking inning in the fourth.

Evans tripled home two runs to tie the game and Rick Burleson, a defensive star all through the series, doubled home another to give the Red Sox their go-ahead run.

Then they wrapped up the win when a fourth run scored with the help of an infield error and a fifth scored on Yastrzemski's single. That made it 5-2 Boston before the Reds came back in their half of the inning on run-scoring hits by Dave Concepcion and Geronimo.

Racing: Some Helpful Hints on Handicapping

The sport of horse racing probably began about 4,000 years ago and picking winners has been a popular pastime ever since.

It will be the same story as Sandown Park starting Friday when the thoroughbreds return after a four-year hiatus, which is why, and by popular demand, of course, that Walker's Handy Hints to Horseplayers today makes its annual appearance in this corner.

This is a special service to Times readers, especially those who will be viewing the Sport of Kings for the first time. Racing, you see, is a chancy business at best and it isn't always the favorite that gets down in front. In the recent Arc de Triomphe classic in Paris a 133-1 shot romped home the winner and if that was considered an upset imagine what an Exactor it would have made as the second horse got away at 100-1. Besides, it should be explained that in any handicapping system only 30 per cent of the public picks cross the finish line first.

Which brings lesson No. 1. Just because a horse is an odds-on favorite, it doesn't follow that it is the best horse in the race. It's simply that the bettors, through the wagering, have established they think it is. And it is the bettors who make it the favorite. What sometimes happens, and many punters are guilty, is that often a bettor has worked out his personal choices the night before, only to change at trackside because of the odds on the board. They then hop aboard the hot favorite and then sit back and watch their overnight selection romp down at four or five to one.

As to systems, there aren't any; of there would never be any losers. Still, there are a few hints that may help. Learn to read the form chart. That tells you all about a horse; those competing against it; whether one horse has been running with better stock; whether another has been out for a time, perhaps with an injury; whether one horse prefers a sloppy track, another a hard surface, likes to run short distances, or long, and so on.

* * *

There's an age-old argument too — whether its better to take a speed horse or a come-from-behinder if they otherwise are considered equal.

The general rule-of-thumb is take the speed horse providing there aren't other speed horses in the race. In which case they may run each other into the ground and the plodder will come bouncing home. This is particularly true on small tracks, or bull rings, as Sandown is. And if you're confused between "mud" and "slop". slop is accepted as being like "fast", meaning a speed horse should like that type of going.

You'll hear too of horses that "ran short" the last out. That means it didn't hold its speed, figures to do better next time and, if it was close, deserves a longer look in its next race.

* * *

It's true too that horses don't always run to their works, and if a horse has been idle for a time it could be that the trainer will instruct the jockey not to go all out because of fear of an injury. That's a part of racing too. At this time of the year however, it's unlikely that many trainers will be sending out starters just for a run. Time's a wastin', as the saying goes; and if you note that there is a significant jockey change, the leading rider in place of a bug boy, for example, take note. The horse may be ready and the trainer is just trying to make sure.

Still, a word of caution. There is no easy way to win. And if you intend to make a wager or two, lean on your friendly handicapper, check the Racing Form, have fun, and don't bet more than you can afford. That's the real secret.

And bring money . . . and oh, yes . . . rubbers!

BEING PONIED in preparation for Friday's opening day thoroughbred card at Sandown Park, near Sidney is Collio, an entry in the second race for maiden three- and four-year-olds. The pony girl is Sandy Stuckles, originally from Ontario. There will be eight races on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays and nine on Saturdays during the 16-day meeting which closes Nov. 11.

More Comfort For Fans

Workmen were still busy on Wednesday at Sandown Park getting ready for the opening of the 16-day thoroughbred meeting which opens at the Sidney track Friday after an absence of four years.

And the racing fans should be pleased with what they see.

The stands have been tidied up and freshly painted; there is a completely covered walkway from the main grandstand to the paddock area and around the paddock ring; yellow ribbons (or a reasonable facsimile) adorn the big Oak trees in the area; a new lounge has been established in the old tea room; there will be a "Turf Club" behind the old tea room with a viewing area on the south side of the grandstand, and, for patrons of the lounge, there will also be a covered entrance.

The mutuel machines are all in place and being readied for the onslaught of bettors; track officials will have the benefit of video-tape instant replay for any violations or photo finishes that result (and this is brand new for Sandown); there will be five TV monitors on the grounds for fans to view the running of the race, or the re-run; there are already approximately 200 horses on the grounds with more expected as 285 can be stabled there; there are at least 100 others who will van over from the mainland plus expected entries from horse owners who have private farms.

That's part of the picture being presented by the Capital City Turf Club which is attempting to re-establish horse racing as a sport in the city area.

The last meeting here was under the auspices of the B.C. Jockey Club in the fall of 1970. The CCTC is an organization composed of several city businessmen including Ed Popham, George Harknett, Derek Green, Derek Todd, Gerald Millburn, Dave Bowman and Ray Bryant. It is a non-profit organization and was formed with the sole objective of getting horse racing back on the Island. Any profits made on this venture will be returned to the B.C. Thoroughbred Breeders Society, it was announced earlier.

The original budget for upgrading the facilities at Sandown by the CCTC was set at $30,000 and it hasn't been an unusual sight the past few days at the track to see some of the directors picking up a hammer or a paint brush at times. Todd, for instance, spent most of two days tying ribbons on the Oak trees.

Now, what remains mostly is for the weatherman to cooperate. The track was muddy Wednesday, but drying out. However, the base is in excellent shape according to Jim Diamond, the track supervisor who held the same position at Exhibition Park in Vancouver.

Friday's opening card filled with the feature at one mile attracting six entries, with the contention expected between Flashy Form, Rishalee and Y.B. Wise.

Patrons are reminded too that there will be exactor betting on the first and last races each day and quinella wagering on all other races. This is a first for B.C.

First post Friday will be 1 p.m.

Cats Find Cohesion

The alibis of earlier reversals Wednesday formed the foundation for Victoria Cougars' first road victory in the 1975-76 Western Canada Hockey League season.

The Cougars ended a five-game losing streak by defeating Flin Flon Bombers 3-0 with an obvious turnabout in goal, on defence and the power play.

It was the lack of those technicalities that seemed to contribute most to Victoria's struggling takeoff this season.

The goaltending hasn't been all that bad, but lacked a satisfying steadiness expected by coach Pat Ginnell. The power play has been impotent, and there was greater disappointment in the early performances by Victoria's defence.

It all turned around Wednesday in Flin Flon's Whitney Forum.

Goaltender Gerry Simpson blocked 35 drives in flawless and often brilliant fashion; the defence came up big, and the power play came through with all three goals before about 1,300 fans.

Cougars play in Flin Flon again tonight and then wrap up a tough, nine-game road trip with games in Winnipeg and Brandon.

Danny Lucas and Jim Gustafson both scored their seventh goals and rookie Greg Anderson counted his second to handle scoring. Gustafson also picked up an assist to run his point total to 22 and move into third place in the individual scoring race.

Cougars, despite the absence of injured Al Hill and Rick Martin, carried the play most of the way. They outshot Flin Flon 50-35, a margin that draws added significance when compared to the penalty totals.

Cougars drew 20 of the game's 33 minors, and Victoria's penalty-killers played a prominent role in helping Simpson record his first WCHL shutout. Bombers held a two-player advantage on three occasions but failed to score.

In other games, Darrell Ferner's three goals helped Kamloops Chiefs to salvage a 5-5 tie with Edmonton Oil Kings; the hot Winnipeg Clubs made it four straight by tripping New Westminster Bruins 6-2, and Brandon Wheat Kings edged Regina Pats 6-5.

Finally Some Success For Stars' New Coach

By The Canadian Press

Life behind the bench of Minnesota North Stars has not been all that pleasant for rookie coach Ted Harris.

Harris, a 15-year veteran of the National Hockey League, took over the Minnesota coaching reins this season with a vow to make the North Stars competitors in NHL's Smythe Division.

Minnesota finished a poor fourth last season with 53 point, just 12 ahead of the expansion Kansas City Scouts. The North Stars were anything but bright lights during pre-season play as they floundered to a 1-3-3 record.

The regular season got off to a bad start as the North Stars dropped a 3-2 home-ice decision to Vancouver Canucks and then were outscored 9-5 by Philadelphia Flyers, the team Harris played for last season as they won the Stanley Cup.

However, Harris now has his first NHL coaching win following Minnesota's 4-1 triumph over the travel-weary California Seals in one of five games played Wednesday night.

In other action, Pittsburgh Penguins bombed Toronto Maple Leafs 8-4, New York Rangers edged Atlanta Flames 3-1, Los Angeles Kings nipped Washington Capitals 4-3 and Chicago Black Hawks came from behind to tie Detroit Red Wings 4-4.

In Minnesota before just over 8,135 fans, Bill Goldsworthy scored his 249th and 250th career goals to lead the North Stars to victory.

Goldsworthy opened the scoring with a power-play goal at 11:04 of the first period. He zoomed in on California goaltender Gary Simmons and lifted a backhand shot home at 16:35 of the second period for his second goal of the night.

Penguins defenceman Ron Stackhouse broke a 4-4 tie in the second period to start the Penguins to their win. The goal came against Doug Favell, who replaced Gord McRae at the start of the second period.

Centre Vic Venasky scored on a power play with 4:38 remaining in the third period to give the Kings their home-opening win over the Capitals. The win was the second in four games for the Kings while the Caps now are 0-5.

Only 11,000 fans were on hand at Chicago Stadium for the Detroit-Chicago contest which saw Ivan Boldirev score two goals late in the third period one after a face-off and the other on a pass from Cliff Koroll to give the Black Hawks the tie.

Liske a Hero For a Change

OTTAWA (CP) — Veteran quarterback Peter Liske has been listening to boos for most of the 1974 Canadian Football League season, but Wednesday night he brought the catcalls down on the Rough Riders as British Columbia Lions upset Ottawa 25-15.

He also showed Ottawa's highly publicized rookie quarterbacks, Tom Clements and Condredge Holloway, how to dissect defences as he sliced apart the Riders' secondary for 225 yards passing in the first half.

He finished the game with 16 completions on 24 pass attempts for 269 yards and three touchdowns, two to slotback Jim Young and one to wide receiver Ross Clarkson.

Liske, in his first year with the Lions after being traded by Calgary Stampeders, has passed for 2,000 yards and 11 touchdowns this season.

B.C. was without the services of injured fullback Lou Harris but Terry Bailey and Mike Strickland, in his first game with the Lions, provided the running punch Liske needed.

Brian Berg, the fourth B.C. placekicker this year, converted all three touchdowns and added a 27-yard field goal. Eric Guthrie rounded out the scoring with a 47-yard single.

Ottawa fullback Art Green, who scored both Rider touchdowns on short runs, passed the 1,000-yard rushing mark for the season late in the game. Gerry Organ converted the first score and Clements passed to tight end Tony Gabriel for a twopoint conversion on the second.

As Green retrieved the ball to mark his rushing accomplishment, he was greeted with a standing ovation from the 19,002 spectators. It was about the only time the Riders heard any cheers from the crowd, the smallest of the season in Lansdowne Park.

One Crop Too Many For Day

MEXICO CITY (CP) — One aspect of the Pan-American Games, equestrian controversy was settled Wednesday night when officials confirmed that Jim Day of Hornby, Ont., had been disqualified from the three-day event.

But another issue had sprung up—whether Elizabeth Ashton of Orangeville, Ont., would get back the 35 seconds she lost when a Mexican army officer insisted she must back her horse into a water hazard before remounting after a fall.

Day was disqualified because officials said he broke a three-day event rule by taking his crop in for the weigh-in. Day said Canadian team officials insisted there was no such rule and equestrian authorities finally agreed.

But Day added that they turned around and disqualified him for jumping out of turn—a point he disputed on grounds that he missed his turn because equestrian judges refused to let him go when he was supposed to.

Finally, the Canadians agreed there was, in fact, a rule against being weighed in with a crop. The disqualification was made official.

That meant Day's points would not be counted but since only three scores are tallied for each team, the Canadians could get along without him.

What would help is the return of the 35 seconds Miss Ashton lost. It happened when she fell on a water jump. She tried to remount just beyond the jump but the army officer observing at the jump forced her back into the water.

By coincidence a CBC crew was filming that very jump and equestrian officials agreed to look at the film and then decide whether to give Miss Ashton back her lost time.

United States rider Bruce Davidson also became embroiled in the Day controversy when officials mistook him for Day and interrupted his ride in the middle of Wednesday's crosscountry competition to impose the disqualification.

After discovering they had the wrong man, officials allowed Davidson to continue and his time penalty points and a penalty for a fall were taken away, leaving him in first place with a strong chance for the individual gold medal.

Gold Will Be Rare in Montreal

RON BOWKER

By JIM CRERAR

Times Staff

Too little too late.

Coach of the Esquimalt Athletic Club as well as the cross country and track teams at Esquimalt High School, Bowker feels we've blown an excellent chance to sell the sport to our own public.

"To produce a couple of gold medallists with the whole country watching would have been a tremendous boost," he said, "but we're too late."

It might have been a different story, he suspects, if the games had been anywhere else except Montreal.

"As it turned out, Montreal was an unfortunate choice," he explained. "There's no doubt that public acceptance would have been better if Toronto had been the site."

The reason, he added, is that Montreal was the site of Expo '67 and the Canadian public was in no mood to foot the bill for another international extravaganza in the Quebec metropolis.

The federal government saw it that way, too. Prime Minister Trudeau has repeatedly refused to spend federal tax dollars on the Olympics, leaving Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau to foot the bill through a series of lotteries.

Bowker, a former administrative assistant with the B.C. Track and Field Association, suspects public reaction against Montreal also hindered the development of a Canadian track team capable of striking gold.

"Because of the political backlash against Montreal, the federal government had to hold back on funds needed to develop such a team," he said. "It has only been within the past year that Abby Hoffman (a women's 800-metre finalist for Canada in the 1972 Olympics in Munich) has made enough noise to enable our athletes to get the time off and expenses they need to properly prepare for 1976. Even at that, we still lack proper training facilities."

Bowker suggests a training program should have been started in 1971 when Montreal got the games.

"By 1973 we should have known most of the people who had medal potential," he explained. "There might have been 20 such athletes in track and field. A high-powered approach with them might have produced one or two golds."

An Olympic track medal is a rarity in Canada, anyway. We've won only three in seven Olympics since the Second World War. Our last track and field gold was won by Vancouver's Dunc McNaughton in the 1932 high jump in Los Angeles.

Forty-four years is a long time in the wilderness and, although the prospects aren't golden in Montreal, Bowker believes our athletes will make an increasing number of finals.

In this day and age, that's no mean achievement.

Delta Youth Wins Judo Gold As Crowd Voices Disapproval

MEXICO CITY (CP) — The youngest member of Canada's judo team won a gold medal at the Pan-American Games Wednesday night and promptly found himself in the middle of a lively controversy.

Brad Farrow of Delta, B.C., was awarded the gold in the featherweight division when his Cuban opponent, Hector Rodriguez, was disqualified for committing his third foul of the final bout.

The crowd, which has tended to favor Latin competitors over North American opponents all week, loudly expressed its displeasure and police had to restrain some spectators who attempted to get at the officials.

It may have been a left-handed compliment to the Canadians, who finished the judo competition with three of the six gold medals and two bronzes.

Farrow, an 18-year-old student at Concordia University in Montreal, was the only Canadian gold medallist of the day as Cuba and the United States continued to grab the lion's share of the spoils.

The Cubans, with eight gold medals Wednesday, ran their total to 22 in three days' competition. The Americans had won 18, seven of them Wednesday.

Brazil matched Canada's total of four golds with a world record performance by Joao Oliveira in the men's triple jump. The Mexicans, the only other team on the gold medal table, picked up their third when Manuel Bautista won the 20-kilometre walk.

Abby Hoffman of Toronto, who has been competing in the Pan-Am 800 metres since 1963 and has two gold medals and a bronze to prove it, added a silver to the collection as she was unable to match the finishing kick of 17-year-old Kathleen Weston of the U.S. Joan Wenzel of Waterloo, Ont., was third.

Dan Robitaille of Ottawa won the first Canadian medals in weightlifting, a trio of bronzes for finishing third in the snatch, jerk and over-all categories in the middleweight division.

The shooting team captured a bronze in the small-bore, three position rifle event, its third medal of the Games, and Chris Preobrazenski moved up from the light-heavyweight judo class, where he had already won a bronze, to take another in the unlimited competition.

A virtually certain gold medal loomed on today's program for pentathlon star Diane Jones of Saskatoon, who held a comfortable lead after three events with her long-jump specialty still to come.

Farrow, who had not been expected to win a gold medal, was nettled when a Mexican reporter asked him whether he thought he was better than Rodriguez, ranked third in the world in his division.

Doug Simpson added two goals for the Flyers with singles coming from Terry Ellison, Corky Adams, Gene Wrigglesworth and Greg Chadwick.

International Action Has Lost Appeal: Brian

SOCCER

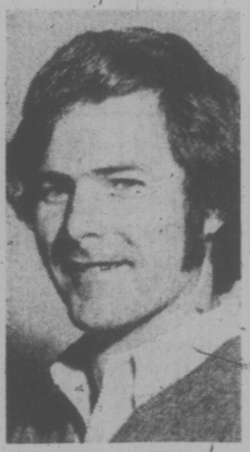
Instead, he's in Victoria coaching and playing for London Boxing Club in the Vancouver Iland Soccer League.

The two wouldn't appear to be parallel experiences, but to Brian they are.

One reason is that, after four years on the Canadian squad, playing "about 30 times" for his country—including more than 20 games against other countries' full national sides—the 27-year-old Robinson has had his fill of international soccer. At least for the time being.

The last time he played for Canada was against East Germany in a pre-Olympic tournament in Toronto in July. And at that time Brian was in hospital for two days with a virus infection, from which he still hasn't completely recovered.

Add that to a "few personal reasons" like a preference to being here with his wife, Bonnie, and 16-month-old son, Drew, his job with the City Council's parks department, and his new task as player-coach of the Boxers, and you can see why he decided to stay.



BRIAN ROBINSON
. . . prefers coaching

"I had a long discussion with national coach Colin Morris and we both decided that, as I wasn't really mentally and physically prepared for it, it would be better if I didn't go to Mexico," says Robinson.

Brian's teammate, Bob Bolitho, Ray Telford of Nanaimo City and John McGuire of Victoria West who is making his debut on the national squad, are in Mexico with the Canadian team.

"But there's no way I'm out of it," insists Brian.

But as you sit and chat over a cup of coffee, you can tell he's not really all that keen on playing at the moment. The big thing is coaching the Boxers.

Under coach George Fox, a Scotsman who came from eastern Canada and joined the club last season, and assistant coaches Frank Grealy and Robinson, the Boxers last year won everything—the Island title, the B.C. crown and the Canadian championship.

Now Brian has taken over from George and he feels that, although it's "far away", the club has a good chance of repeating as national champ.

"We lost Danny Lomas and Ken Ross this year to the University of Victoria Vikings and still have Jan Bentley and Dean Stokes out with bad leg injuries," Brian explains. "But we've got Jim Irvine back, after a two-year layoff, and have a good new player in Danny Hood, who was with Cosmopolitan Royals last year." Hood, leading scorer in the Victoria High School Soccer League last season, also plays for Spectrum.

"Our biggest problem is overcoming complacency and tiredness," Robinson says, "because the players played all last winter and had to stay in shape all summer to play in the Dominion Cup final."

Brian doesn't even believe in being a playing coach.

"You can't do two at once adequately," he says, and adds that when Bolitho gets back to fill the gap, he will be on the bench.

"Right now I'm more interested in coaching and in bringing up juvenile players," he says.

"But I'm still keen on the national program — it's just a matter of getting myself motivated for it. Both the coach and I hope that I will be able to make a comeback after this layoff.

"Canada's next tour is to England in April so I've got a bit of time yet before that.

"You know, ever since I was a juvenile, I've dreamed of playing for my national team in the Olympic Games," he says with a smile. "Now that dream is within reach . . . and I'm not going to throw it all away."

'It Wasn't Really Hockey'

By The Canadian Press

"It wasn't really hockey; it looked like a football game out there," said goaltender Gerry Cheevers.

His Cleveland Crusaders defeated Minnesota Fighting Saints 8-4 in a World Hockey Association game which wound up with 205 minutes in penalties.

The Crusaders received 107 minutes including one 10-minute misconduct, four game misconducts, five majors and 16 minors. The Saints were assessed two misconducts, three game misconducts, four majors and 14 minors for 98 minutes.

In another game, Ron Climie's second goal of the game at 6:52 of a sudden-death overtime period gave New England Whalers a 5-4 home-ice win over Edmonton Oilers before 7,120 fans.

At St. Paul, Minn., before a crowd of 10,742, Cheevers turned back 28 shots in the final two periods to help the Crusaders beat the Saints.

Cheevers and opposing goalie Mike Curran were among 20 players charged with penalties in the game handled by referee Ron Asselstine.

He ejected six players—Jim Harrison, Gerry Pinder and Paul Baxter of Cleveland along with Steve and Jack Carlson and Carl Brackenbury of Minnesota after a second-period melee.

However, the lone casualty during the wild contest was Minnesota's Rick Smith, who suffered a broken nose and required 10 stitches after apparently being speared in the second period.

"We proved we wouldn't be intimidated by anybody," said Cheevers. "The Saints have to be one of the toughest teams in hockey and we more than held our own with them."

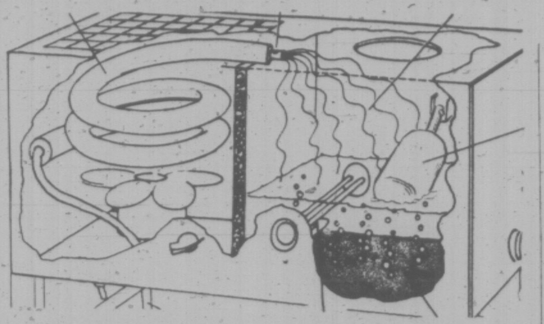
Sure, We've Got Good Water But Joe Wants to Improve It

By AB KENT
Times Staff



STAINLESS STEEL innards of domestic drinking water still are exposed in cutaway drawing. Boiler at right heated by electric element sends steam through coil at left, cooled by electric fan to produce pure water. Mineral and organic residue remains at bottom of boiler.

If Joe Cacioppo can sell water purifiers in Victoria, he can sell coals in Newcastle and freezers in Fairbanks.

But dedication counts, and Cacioppo believes that no matter how pure a city's water supply may be, it can only be made better by distillation.

Hence, the line of home water stills he has been offering at $259 for the portable model to $1,099 for the deluxe floor model with built-in reservoir and fountain.

Stills are common in some parts of the world, particularly where water supplies are acknowledged to be inferior, polluted or inadequate.

Cacioppo concedes Victoria water may be "the best in the world, but is it really safe?"

He cites mineral constituents as the most dangerous long-term threat in most water systems, particularly hard water.

"We are practically selling rain water."

There is the occasional organic material from growth which develops in the system, and some mineral leached into the reservoirs with runoff or from the pipes in the distribution network.

Samples are analysed from time to time, but the results "never vary," Upward maintains.

Cacioppo insists "water varies from place to place, carrying inorganic minerals the body cannot utilize and they accumulate in the body."

He offers literature from pure food faddists, anti-flouridationists, public health authorities and others extolling the virtues of distilled water. The U.S. Public health Service and U.S. department of Agriculture Rural Electrification Administration is quoted:

"The only proven method of correcting cooking and drinking water pollution in the home is through the use of a home water distiller."

Cacioppo is quick to add that even rainwater contains bacteria, virus and chemical pollutants, while piped water may be tainted from rust in the system if nothing else.

Distilling water removes all organic and inorganic material, leaving it tasteless and odorless.

"You would see the difference between water from any tap in Victoria and distilled water — I can show you — and then you could decide for yourself," he said.

PLAGUE RATS THREATEN U.S.

WASHINGTON (WP) — Plague, a rat-borne condition that at various times has devastated Europe, Asia and Africa, is "well-established in the rural rodent population of the western United States," according to a report from the General Accounting Office.

At the same time, the report said, the federally-sponsored urban rat-control program is in serious trouble.

Plague has not appeared in the U.S. "to any great degree since 1924," but, the report noted rats bearing plague carrying fleas "were trapped on the outskirts of a major Western city (which it did not name) in 1971 — evidence of the potential hazard."

". . . Were the diseased rodents to come in contact with urban rodents, the possibility exists that plauge could be transmitted to populated areas," the report said.

There was as large outcry when the rat-control program was proposed as a $40 million venture in July, 1967, but the House of Representatives later accepted a revised version.

WOMEN TO MARCH TO SUM UP ISSUES

The Women's Action Coalition has invited the public to join a march at noon Oct. 25 from the Post Office to the Legislative Buildings to protest the federal government's "lack of concern" on issues which affect the status of women.

The march is to coincide with the government's summing up of its achievements for International Women's Year.

"On that same day we are planning to sum up all the issues the government hasn't dealt with," the coalition said.

The coalition wants abortion to be removed from the Criminal Code, to make it a matter of free choice for a woman and her doctor, to free Dr. Henry Morgentaler, equal pay and job opportunities and equal rights in marriage and property laws.

MLAs have been invited and there will be speakers on each of these issues.

Railmen Charge They're Victims

SASKATOON (CP) — Traditional images were reversed Wednesday as the first hearings of the Hall commission on grain-handling opened with railway spokesmen forcefully describing themselves as the financially-starved and exploited servants of prosperous farmers and agricultural companies.

In testimony that covered the entire day's session, CNR officials said their rail system for handling Prairie grain is already run down and decaying further due to grain freight rates that were frozen in 1925 at 1899 levels and to other government action that is preventing them from abandoning branch lines that in total lose scores of millions of dollars annually because of low grain volume.

CNR president Robert Bandeen declared that "I am frankly unable to believe that any valid or reasonable basis can exist in 1975 which could possibly justify any government in forcing railways to subsidize, out of their own pockets, this prosperous Prairie export grain industry.

"This, in effect, is what happens when we are required to move grain hundreds of miles to terminal elevators at Thunder Bay, Vancouver, Victoria, Prince Rupert or Churchill at the same price charged in 1899."

A. R. Williams, vice-president of the CNR Prairie region, was equally strong in complaining that railway attempts to rationalize the rail system have been frustrated while the grain elevator companies have been free to abandon their delivery points at will.

"It is only then the elevators abandon the rail line and leave it dead that we are allowed to give the rusty remains a decent burial.

"The railways are then accused of having a callous disregard for the interests of farmers and local communities when in fact the railways are the last to leave."

Williams said much of the CNR branch-line system is in such poor condition that new grain hoppers cars cannot move safely on it and even old boxcars face speed restrictions.

"I you find these facts disturbing, remember that most of this trackage was laid before the First World War, our revenue from carrying grain is based on 1899 rates, and we have been prohibited from abandoning our operations on these branch lines even though many of them have long since outlived their usefulness."

He maintained that government subsidies the railways receive to continue operating a few uneconomic branch lines do little to offset the railways' large losses on grain traffic.

The best route to an efficient rail system, he said, would be to have grain traffic pay its own way, yielding money for modernization.

"If the government of Canada considers that this change would be unfair to grain producers for historical reasons or would have an unduly adverse effect on their income and that some form of relief should be provided, such relief should be given directly to the producers and not to the railways."

As an example of how grain farmers could get a subsidy equivalent to the Crowsnest rates, he said the farmers could be allowed tax deductions which would equal the extra cost of the higher grain freight rate the railways want.

Bandeen contended that the fact the CNR is owned by the federal government does not mean the railway should accept losses on grain traffic with complacency.

"We have to operate on a business basis to meet our responsibilities as managers of this corporation, which belongs to the people of Canada," he said. "If CN gives any commodity or any region special treatment which results in a loss, we are in effect spending taxpayers' money and formulating national transportation policy."

Mercury Pollution Worry Among North Indians

VANCOUVER (CP) — Although the provincial government has been asked to investigate mercury pollution at Pinchi Lake, Indians there say a more immediate problem is posed at Stuart Lake.

Nick Prince, spokesman for the Nescoslic Indian reserve near Fort St. James, said Wednesday that his reserve and Stuart-Trembleur Indians have not fished in Pinchi Lake "for a long time" because they knew it was polluted.

"Indian people reported finding dead fish floating on the lake and in 1968 we got up a petition asking for a biologist to examine the fish but we were ignored," said Prince.

"We tried to bring the situation to the attention of the authorities but the white people wouldn't listen."

Pinchi Lake, about 100 miles northwest of Prince George, drains into Stuart Lake in two places and was once the site of a mercury mine owned by Cominco Ltd.

While Pinchi Lake was once a major fishing area for the reserve, fish camps are gone and no one goes there anymore but Stuart Lake is fished a great deal, Prince said.

"We've been getting worms in the fish from Stuart Lake and we don't know what causes them," said Prince. "It's never been known before in history to find worms in the fish . . . it makes me kind of suspicious."

Ross Peterson, a Vancouver environmental consultant, has called for medical examinations to be made of Indians who ate fish from Pinchi Lake for any length of time.

"We recommended back in 1970 that the whole situation should be explored more fully," said Peterson.

"Now we hear that the mercury levels are even higher and I think medical checks should be made of the Indians."

Peterson said in 1970, he reported mercury levels in Pinchi Lake trout ranged from to to four parts per million.

The level permitted in Canada is .5 parts per million and the World Health Organization recommends an allowable level of .05 parts per million.

Peterson said in that report that the contamination was probably caused by "untreated tailings" dumped into the lake from a mercury mine during the Second World War.

TRUDEAU TO B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau will be the feature attraction at a $100-a-plate fund-raising dinner to be held Nov. 21 at the Hotel Vancouver.

About 1,000 tickets are expected to be sold with proceeds going to federal and provincial Liberal activities in B.C., according to Ralph Brown, chairman of the organizing committee.

Pen Trio Transfer Case Adjourned to Dec. 8

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A provincial government application seeking to reverse a court order holding three British Columbia Penitentiary prisoners at the nearby lower Mainland Regional Correctional Institute was adjourned to Dec. 8, Wednesday in Supreme Court.

Lawyer Tom Fisher, representing the Crown, asked whether Judge Phillip Govan's order concerning the prisoners, held in connection with a June hostage incident at the B.C. Penitentiary, was proper.

The order transferring prisoners Andy Bruce, Dwight Lucas an Clair Wilson from the federal penitentiary to the provincially-run insititute was made after the prisoners claimed they were being abused in the penitentiary.

The case was adjourned after lawyer Jim Hogan, representing Lucas, said he had not received transcripts of the provincial court proceedings.

Hogan said after the court session that Judge Govan had indicated he wanted to be represented by counsel in the proceedings, but that the provincial government would not appoint a lawyer.

In Victoria, lawyer Bob Simpon of the attorney-general's department confirmed that Judge Govan had asked for counsel and that the request had been denied.

Simpson said it was departmental policy that when both sides of an issue were represented by lawyers, no lawyer would be provided a judge.

Simpson said the cases in which a judge is provided with legal counsel are rare and that he could only remember three such cases in the past 11 years.

Brown, Levi Win Re-Nomination

VANCOUVER (GP) — Human Resources Minister Norm Levi and MLA Rosemary Brown easily defeated challenger Ron Johnson on Wednesday to win the New Democratic Party nomination in the two-seat provincial riding of Vancouver-Burrard.

Johnson said he was running because Levi voted for Bill 146.

LABOR BOARD SUED

VANCOUVER (CP) — A trade union has filed a writ in British Columbia Supreme Court which challenges the constitutional authority of the B.C. Labor Relations Board.

Local 580 of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union has asked for an injunction to prevent the labor board from holding further hearings into a lispute involving the union, the Brewery Workers Union and Uncle Ben's Beverages Ltd.

The board began hearings Tuesday on a dispute which concerns the brewery workers' adherence to a B.C. Federation of Labor hot edict placed on all Uncle Ben's products as a result of a strike by the RWDSU at the Uncle Ben's soft drink plant in Richmond, which is controlled by Ben Ginter.

As a result of the hot declaration, the brewery workers have refused to work at Ginter's Prince George brewery — an act he says amounts to an illegal strike.

The RWDSU's writ charges that by proceeding with its hearing, members of the labor board acted "contrary to principles of natural justice and are exercising and are performing duties in contravention of the statutory object and limitation imposed by the Labor Code."

Nixon Nearly Indicted Twice

First impeachment proceedings herded them off and finally they were stopped by President Ford's pardon.

The presecutors said in their 277-page final report Wednesday that they felt they were on firm legal ground both times, but were not sure an indictment of Nixon while he was still president would be upheld by the supreme court.

Although the Watergate prosecutors' office will remain in business to handle appeals and perhaps one or two new cases of minor nature, the work is generally done, the report said. It detailed 63 men indicted, 53 men convicted, 19 corporations guilty of illegal campaign contributions.

The prosecutors said some of the evidence they presented to grand juries — including Nixon's sworn statement — will remain sealed since it did not lead to criminal action. It would be unfair to those named in the evidence to have the material released without chance for rebuttal in court, they said.

Some major investigations did not lead to criminal action for lack of presentable evidence. The prosecutors said they could not unravel the 18½-minute gap on a crucial White House tape, nor find evidence of illegality in the $100,000 that billionaire Howard Hughes gave to Nixon friend Charles G. "Bebe" Rebozo.

There was evidence, they said, that transcrips of White Hose tapes given to the house in the impeachment investigation had been deliberately altered to remove evidence damaging to Nixon. But criminal liability for the deletions could not be ascertained.

One matter still pending, prosecutors said, is the charge that the ambassadorship to Luxembourg was sold to Ruth Farkas for a $300,000 Nixon campaign contribution.

For the first time in the two and a half year investigation of the nation's worst political scandal, the report made clear that Nixon twice was on the brink of indictment.

The first time was in early 1974 when prosecutors learned from the March 21, 1973, tape that he had had extensive knowledge of the cover-up activities.

But prosecutor Leon Jaworski concluded the supreme court might not uphold the indictment of an incumbent president, nd the whole process would seriously delay the impeachment proceedings, so instead the grand jury named Nixon an unindicted co-conspirator in the cover-up.

When Nixon resigned last August, there was no longer a constitutional question involved, and prosecutors rekindled the indictment discussion. They decided to delay legal action until the cover-up jury was sequestered. On Sept. 8, Ford's pardon halted their plans.

Cox Anticipated Firing, Hid Crucial Evidence

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former special prosecutor Archibald Cox anticipated Richard Nixon would fire him, and he and his staff. Hid their most crucial evidence in bank vaults so it could not be destroyed.

Nixon's firing of Cox two years ago this weekend stunned the U.S. and touched off the "firestorm" of public outrage that eventually led to Nixon's downfall.

An account of Cox's ouster is contained in the prosecutors' final report on the Watergate investigation released Wendesday.

Unbudging on his subpoena for White House tapes, Cox was warned twice that mid-October week by the White House that "we will be forced to take the actions that the president deems appropriate under the circumstances."

On Saturday night, he was fired and FBI agents swept in to occupy his offices.

"Although official documents could not be removed, the most important and sensitive documents had been copied earlier in the week," the report said. ". . . Task force leaders and other senior staff members theh removed copies of certain items from the office . . . copies of documents of a particularly sensitive nature were placed in two safe deposit boxes in nearby banks."

8,000 N.Y. WORKERS FACE ABRAHAM'S AXE

NEW YORK (UPI) — Some 8,000 city workers, including thousands of teachers and up to 900 policemen, face firing under Mayor Abraham Beame's latest attempt to save New York from default.

The cutbacks are being proposed despite a warning from municipal labor leaders of "inevitable conflict and a general strike" by their 270,000 members if further layoffs are made.

The emergency financial control board, the state-created agency overseeing city finances, today begins considering the austerity plan to slash $200 million from the current budget and has until Monday to accept, modify or reject it.

In addition to the new layoffs, an estimated 23,000 other jobs will be eliminated through attrition. As of the end of September, 22,000 city employees already had been sliced from the payroll

Keep Missiles, Senate Asked

WASHINGTON (WP) — U.S. Defence Secretary James Schlesinger has asked the Senate to keep the Safeguard anti-ballistic missile system operational for a year and to permit testing of an advanced warhead for the Trident intercontinental ballistic missile.

The house-passed defence appropriations bill cut off funds for both programs as part of some $7.6 billion cut from the President's $97.8 billion defence department budget request for the current fiscal year.

Schlesinger's requests were contained in a letter to Senate appropriations committee chairman John McClellan outlining $2.6 billion he wants restored. He later reiterated his positon at a closed door defence appropriations subcommittee meeting.

The House decision to mothball the Safeguard system came within days of the Grand Forks, N.D., site becoming operational after eight years of development.

Safeguard originally was to be a 12-site system. The May 1972 ABM treaty with the Soviet Union limited each country to two sites, and the Nixon Administration decided to build only one.

Schlesinger, in his letter to McClellan, said the house was "unwise," to cut out Safeguard "without attempting to extract a concession" from the Soviet Union.

In the future the Grand Forks long-range radar system "may be used to augment" missile early warning and satellite detection, he hinted.

In cutting funds for the Trident warhead, the house committee noted that the U.S. Air Force had a more advanced re-entry vehicle in development.

The committee also said a 1972 ABM agreement and subsequent 1974 protocol "eliminated the requirement for development" of such warheads since both the U.S. and Soviet Union were halting ABM system deployment.

Schlesinger also asked for reinstatment of funds to continue development of two controversial strategic weapons systems halted by the House bill — the mobile MX advanced ICBM and the air-launched Cruise.

The SALT I treaty permitted development of both these weapons.

Northrop Expenses Disputed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Northrop Corp., a major defence contractor, purchased the yacht El Commandante in 1972 for company recreational purposes, then tried to get the U.S. government to reimburse $273,000 in operating expenses.

This and other company operations were detailed in an internal Pentagon audit report on Northrop released Wednesday by Rep. Les Aspin, (D—Wis.).

The 93-page report by the defence contract audit agency, dated Aug. 6, 1975, said Northrop paid out $9.9 million in "questionable expenses" between 1971 and 1974 and received compensation of $6.1 million from the federal government under defence contracts.

Northrop disputed the Pentagon's audit report, saying it was "misleading and patently unfair to Northrop."

SS Radio 'Mundane'

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — A Hartford-based private eye says Secret Service communications were monitored with $8,000 worth of radio equipment, and called the agency's level of sophistication "Mundane."

Richard Sulman said he was "troubled and surprised" after he monitored Secret Service communications during President Ford's trip to Hartford Tuesday, which ended with an auto accident in which Ford was unhurt.

Scrambled Egg Filling Makes Compelling Dish

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE and PIERRE FRANEY

CRAIG CLAIBORNE

NEW YORK — Several years ago we dined on an uncommonly interesting dish in an Italian restaurant in Boston. It was roast chicken with a custardlike stuffing that proved to be extremely palatable, not only because of its delicate flavor but also because of its tender gossamerlike texture.

We honestly don't recall the name of the restaurant and would not name it if we did, for it was otherwise undistinguished. After numerous tries in our kitchen, we discovered that the filling was nothing more than well-seasoned scrambled eggs, which, when cooked in the bird, achieved that sought-after and notably compelling stuffing. We further learned that a similar scrambled-egg filling, lightly seasoned with tarragon, is delectable in a veal roll.

CHICKEN STUFFED WITH SCRAMBLED EGGS

5 eggs
¼ cup heavy cream
½ teaspoon chopped tarragon
salt and freshly ground pepper
3½ tablespoons butter
1 two-and-one-half-pound chicken
1 small onion, peeled.

1. Preheat oven to 450 degrees.

2. Beat the eggs in a mixing bowl until well blended. Add the cream, tarragon and salt and pepper to taste.

3. Heat one tablespoon butter in a skillet and add the egg mixture. Cook over low heat, stirring with a rubber spatula, until the eggs are almost set. Do not overcook. Remove from the heat. Stir in one-half tablespoon of butter. cool.

4. Sprinkle the inside of the chicken with salt and pepper and stuff the chicken with the egg mixture. Truss the chicken. Sprinkle the outside with salt and pepper to taste.

5. Melt two tablespoons of butter in a shallow roasting pan and turn the chicken around in it until coated. Add the onion to the pan. Rest the chicken on one side and place it in the oven. Bake 15 minutes, basting occasionally.

6. Turn the chicken to the other side and continue baking about 15 minutes, basting occasionally. Turn the chicken once again and bake 15 minutes, basting often.

7. Untruss the chicken and carve it. Serve the stuffing on the side.

6 eggs
1 teaspoon dried tarragon
Salt and freshly ground pepper
1-3 cup heavy cream
4 tablespoons plus 1 teaspoon butter
¼ pound thinly sliced boiled or baked ham or prosciutto
16 small pickles, preferably cornichons (sour French gherkins), or a few larger sour or dill pickles
2 onions, about one-half pound, peeled and cut into thin rounds
2 carrots, about one-half pound, scraped and cut into thin rounds
1 clove garlic, cut in half
1 rib celery, cut into one-inch lengths.

1. Preheat oven to 450 degrees.

2. Open up the roast for stuffing.

3. In a mixing bowl, combine the eggs with the tarragon, salt and pepper to taste, and heavy cream. Beat well until blended.

4 In a saucepan heat one tablespoon of butter and add the eggs. Cook, stirring, to the soft stage. Remove from the heat and stir in one teaspoon of butter.

5. Sprinkle the veal with salt and pepper. Line it well with the thin slices of ham, covering the open surface. Spoon the eggs up and down the centre. Arrange the pickles down the centre of the eggs. Overlap the edges of the meat so that they enclose the egg mixture. Tie securely up and down with string so that the stuffing does not come out.

6. Sprinkle the veal outside with salt and pepper.

7. Rub a flameproof baking dish with remaining three tablespons of butter. Scatter the onions, carrots, garlic, and celery over the bottom of the dish. Add the veal. Heat the dish on top of the stove and put it in the oven. No liquid is necessary. Bake uncovered one hour and a half.

8. Cover with foil and bake 30 minutes longer, basting occasionally. Then reduce oven heat to 400 degrees.

9. Bake 30 minutes longer. Cut away the trussing string. Slice and serve with the natural juices and pan vegetables. Serve with buttered noodles or mashed potatoes.

Yield: Six to eight servings.

Variations On Granola

By MARY MOORE

Jean S. wrote fron London, Ontario: " . . . point of my letter is — being spurred by the letter to you from a bachelor requesting your health cereals, while we were in Edmonton on sabbatical leave I found that their stores abound in grains and raw cereal products so you don't have to go to a health food store for them.

"The CBC radio station in Edmonton — CBX — asked listeners to sent in their granola recipes and produced a granola booklet. I have been making my own ever since. I have adapted their favorite recipe using a little more flakes, water, honey and oil.

"Here is my version. Mary keep up the good work." Signed Jean S.

As many of you know I have given here five versions of homemade health cereals So I promptly made up Jean's, in turn adding my own variations. It is a little less sweet than most.

CBX GRANOLA

(tampered with by Jean and Mary; 12 cups)

4 c. wheat flakes
4 c. rolled oats (not instant)
½ c. soy flakes or grits
½ c. wheat germ
2-3 c. skim milk powder
1 tsp. sea salt (or plain salt)
½ c. raw sunflower seeds
1 c. coursely chopped nuts
½ c. oil
½ to ¾ c. honey
¾ c. hot water
1 tsp. vanilla

In a very large bowl or clean dishpan combine wheat flakes, rolled oats, soy flakes or grits, wheat germ, milk powder, sea salt, sunflower seeds and nuts.

In a pot mix oil, honey and water. Bring to just below boiling, remove from heat and add vanilla. SLOWLY stir this into flakes mixture using a wire whip to prevent lumps forming. Turn into a roasting pan and bake at 275 deg. Fahr. for 45 minutes stirring 3 times during this baking period. Turn off heat and leave in oven to dry out until oven cools down.

Additions: If you care to you may add 1 cup coconut OR ½ cup sesame seeds OR 1 cup bran OR ½ cup chopped dried apricots OR 1 cup raisins. Jean S. adds that she uses this cereal in place of nuts in fruit crisps and as a topping for ice cream and as a snack food, besides using it, of course as a breakfast cereal with milk.

I like it.

Fabrics help to give a room character. They are used to cover the windows, to upholster sofas and chairs and are made into lampshades, bedspreads and decorative cushions.

The 20-page Guide to Fabrics in the Home tells you about the different fabrics and helps you select those best suited for your purpose. There are also hints how you you can maintain their new look.

Until synthetics gained a foothold, all fabrics in Canada consisted of cotton, linen, silk or wool. Now the market is also flooded with dozens of man-made materials which have different characteristics.

The booklet tells you how to select the best color scheme for a room and explains which kinds of fabrics are suitable for use as upholstery. You will also learn how much material is needed to cover an average piece of furniture.

Useful advice about stain removal is also included. In addition, the pamphlet offers a four-page glossary of fabric terms which you will find truly helpful.

Canada Joins Birth Pill Recall

OTTAWA (CP) — Mordican birth control pills are being recalled by their manufacturer, Ortho Pharmaceutical Canada Ltd., because light lowers their estrogen content slightly, the federal health protection branch said.

Zucchini in Tomato Sauce

6 zucchini squash, 6 inches long
1 pound ground round or chuck
1 egg, beaten
Salt and pepper
1 teaspoon Worcester sauce

Tomato Sauce

1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon grated onion
1 large can Italian-style plum tomatoes
Pinch or two of thyme

Wash but do not pare tender squash. Slice squash into 1-inch pieces or rings. Using an apple corer or sharp knife, remove pulp and seeds from centre of squash rings. Mix ground meat with egg, salt and pepper and Worcestershire sauce and roll into small balls to fit into zucchini slices. Pat meat into slices firmly. Fry the stuffed slices quickly in hot oil, a few at a time taking care to preserve the shape of each separate ring. Ladle them directly into a prepared tomato sauce of your own preference or use this simple one.

Melt butter in pan, stir in minced onion and cook until flavor is released, a minute or two. Then add the tomatoes, mashing them slightly. Flavor with a pinch of thyme or oregano. Simmer a few minutes before adding the lightly-fried zucchini slices. Season to taste and serve immediately on heated platter.

If Botulism Suspected, Throw It Out

NUTRITION BUYLINE

Q: This year I tried home canning for the first time. Recently I heard about botulism. How can I be certain my canned vegetables are safe to eat?

A: Botulism is caused by a toxin (poison) produced by the bacterium Clostridium botulinum. Most cases of botulism can be traced to improper home canning procedures, although some outbreaks have resulted from processing errors by commercial canners of soups, tuna and smoked fish.

The botulism bacteria grow only in airless places — for example, in the vacuum sealed containers used in home canning. They can be destroyed by exposure for ten minutes or more to a temperature of 212 degrees, the temperature reached in water-bath canning.

However, the botulinum spores are not destroyed at this temperature, and the spores can produce more of the deadly bacteria. Water bath canning should only be used therefore, for foods which do not harbor spores of the bacteria. The botulinum spores cannot live in an acid medium, so high acid foods — such as precooked citrus fruits and tomatoes — are the only ones for which water-bath canning can be safely used.

Low-acid foods such as meat, string beans and corn must be processed in a pressure cooker which reaches temperatures above 249 degrees for 15 minutes.

Canned food that is in any suspect must not be sampled until is has been thoroughly cooked. There is no easily recognizable, characteristic odor or sign of botulism contamination — cans do not necessarily bulge, as they do in other kinds of spoilage. It you suspect a food is contaminated, throw it out.

For more informatin on home canning write to: Agriculture Canada, Sir John Carling Building, 930 Carling Ave., Ottawa, Ontario. K1A OC7.

Q: Is there any difference in nutrient value between fresh white grapefruit and pink grapefruit?

A: Both white and pink grapefruit are rich sources of Vitamin C, each containing about 70 milligrams in a medium-sized half. Pink grapefruit has considerably more Vitamin A than white grapefruit, averaging as much as 750 International Units of Vitamin A value in one half.

Q: Instead of three meals a day, I am skipping lunch. Will this help me lose weight?

A: Meal skipping is a poor way to lose weight. It actually may increase appetite for the next meal or for between meal snacks, which results in increased food intake. Skipping meals is likely to lead to the choice of unbalanced diets. Actually, several small and regular meals each day may provide greater satisfaction to the person on a reducing diet than the normal three-meal pattern.

Women's Status Progress Report

elizabeth forbes

The Advisory Council on the Status of Women, in its second annual report over the signature of the chairman, Dr. Katie Cooke, presents evidence that "progress has been made" in implementing a further number of recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women in Canada, also recommendations made by the ACS in the two years of its existence.

Now that the federal government is again in session, the Omnibus Bill on the Staus of Women (Bill C-16) proposing amendments to eight statutes to give equality of status to men and women, appears assured of passage, Dr. Cooke says.

This bill will make it no longer mandatory for a woman to state her martial status as a condition for voting in federal elections and it will give women equal rights to qualify as head of household under the Immigration Act.

It will also remove the rigidities concerning the period during which maternity benefits will be paid under the Unemployment Insurance Act.

Passage of Bill C-20, with its long-awaited amendments to the Citizenship Act is also looked forward to in the AGSW report.

It will "ensure that Canadian mothers have equal rights with fathers to confer Canadian citizenship on their children."

The ACSW regrets that the bill does not contain in it a statement of the principle of the equality of men and women but wishes to see passage of this Bill "on the understanding that in the new citizenship regulations there will be a preamble statement of the principle of non-discrimination on the grounds of sex."

The Passport Division of External Affairs has accepted and will be implementing the ACSW's recommendation that a married woman who continues to use her maiden name after marriage on longer be required to supply additional proof that this is the surname by which she is known in the community.

Inequities in the Canda Pension Plan with respect to women's ability to provide pensions for dependent surviving spouses have been removed and widowers and widows now have equal survivors pension rights.

The enlistment of women in the RCMP is now a fact. An ACSW recommendation that a directive go from the Prime Minister to all crown corporations and agencies stating the government's commitment to equal access for women to job opportunities and training and asking such agencies to take steps to improve this situation in respect of women in their employ has been accepted.

Other ACSW recommendations on which the federal government has acted include the formation of a national advisory committee on female offenders and an advisory council on voluntary action which is examining the role and problems of the voluntary sector in Canadian society, and its relation to government.

In response to another recommendation, Bill C-52 was introduced in February this year.

It proposes amendments to eliminate the inequalities in the Superannuation Acts of the public service, the Canadian forces, the RCMP and the diplomatic service.

In her report Dr. Cooke naturally sees much that remains to be done.

"It is crucial that federal human rights legislation be passed in the House of Commons," she says.

Establishment of a federal Human Rights Commission was determined as a priority of the ACSW in July, 1973. Cabinet acceptance in principle was announced in December the same year.

Yet Bill C-72, the Canada Human Rights Act, that provides for a Human Rights Commission, only recieved first reading in the House of Commons on July 21 of this year, just before Parliament prorogued for the summer.

Amendments to the Canada Labor Code to prohibit discrimination in employment were held back in the fall of 1973, she points out, on grounds these would be included in a Human Rights Bill "to be introduced shortly."

The lack of federal human rights legislation thus means "that women have no recourse in the courts when they are denied access to employment opportunities in areas under federal jurisdiction—the public service, banking, communications and transportation.

Other unresolved areas cover inclusion of homemakers in the Canada Pension Plan and an amendment to the Indian Act to remove the discrimination against women it contains.

Problems relating to divorce, the division of matrimonial property and birth planning are subjects of ongoing discussion in the ACSW.

Family courts, child care services, one-parent families, class action and Canala's position on international instruments of the International Labor Organization and the United Nations are also areas of concern.

The report announces work has begun on ACSW recommendations to government concerning revisions to the Criminal Code in respect of rape and other sexual offences.

In closing Dr. Cooke warns that "the changes which we know to be necessary—the changes that will put into effect the assumptions underlying our democracy—will not happen of their own accord."

Legislative changes are made by Parliament, she reminds us, "but attitudes change only because of genuine public interests and concern."

Then she concludes "it is the efforts of all Canadians that will ensure a more equitable future."

Eggs and Rice Casserole Deluxe

(Serves Five)

¾ cup raw long grain rice
2 cups boiling water
¾ tsp. salt (first amount)
8 hard-cooked eggs (see below)
3 tbsp. margarine or butter
⅓ cup green pepper coarsely chopped
½ cup chopped mild onion
2 tbsp. flour
½ tsp. salt (second amount)
1 "sachet" (foil package) instant chicken bouillon mix
½ tsp. curry powder

Cook the eggs first by putting them in a pot, adding cold water to cover. Bring to boil, reduce heat to as low as possible, cover and let cook 15 minutes. Immediately flood with cold water to chill and prevent discoloring.

Cook the rice in the boiling water with the salt (first amount). Bring to boil covered. Turn off heat for 5 minutes. Turn on heat as low as possible and cook 25 minutes longer.

Drain shrimp and reserve and measure brine and make it up to 1½ cups by adding water.

Make a sauce by melting the margarine or butter. Add green pepper and onion and saute gently for 2 or 3 minutes. Stir in the flour, salt (second amount), chicken bouillon mix and curry powder, then add the water and shrimp liquid and stir until thick.

To assemble tip the cooked rice into large shallow casserole. Carefully shell chilled hard-cooked eggs. Cut them in halves crosswise and arrange cut side up in a circle around edge of casserole, pushing them down a little into the bed of rice. Tip shrimp into centre of casserole. Pour sauce over all. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 25 minutes or until it bubbles. It does not take long to bake if the sauce is poured over while it is hot.

While this is designed for an economical guest meal it also is an economical and different meal for a family dinner.

Fruit Roly Poly

3 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup shortening
1 egg, beaten

FRUIT FILLING

2 cups thick, sweetened applesauce or 1 pound can of any prepared pie filling or 2 cups crushed fruit

Make a soft dough by sifting dry ingredients together, put in shortening, add beaten egg to milk to pour in all at once. Stir only until moistened. Turn out on floured board and knead gently half a minute. Roll into 12- by 15-inch rectangle about one-third of an inch thick. Spread with thick applesauce or any available slightly crushed fruit. Roll up as for jelly roll. Cut into slices, about 1 dozen.

Melt ¼ cup of butter in large baking pan, 9x13 inches. Arrange fruit slices and pour syrup over all. Sprinkle top with sugar and cinnamon. Bake in hot oven, 400 degrees, for 20 minutes. Serve warm with cold milk.

SYRUP

1½ cups sugar
1½ cups water or half fruit juice
1 teaspoon vanilla
Boil syrup ingredients together 5 minutes.

APPLE JAM

WINCHESTER, Va. — U.S. apple growers this fall have produced an apple jam of monumental proportion.

Apple production has soared to what some farmers here in the apple growing Shenandoah Valley claim is a near record level; but, apple processors citing a large surplus of apple products from last year's crop, are not buying much of this year's production.

Farmers and processors alike agree that they've never seen a glut like the current one in recent years. "It's the first crop we couldn't handle" in at least 29 years , said Charles Toan, vice-president

dear abby

Thriving Pot

DEAR ABBY: I love to grow plants. About a year ago, someone gave me some marijuana seeds, and I planted them. Well, they thrived and are really beautiful.

I have never smoked marijuana, and I don't plan to. I know it's against the law to grow it, but would like to know what the fine would be if I were caught.

Please answer in your column for obvious reasons.—NO NAME

DEAR NO NAME: Arthur Groman, a top-notch California attorney, says that you would be charged with "possessing marijuana," and the penalty would vary, depending upon the quantity of marijuana found in your possession.

He suggests you destroy the marijuana and plant geraniums. And if you're wise, you'll take your cue about what to grow from Groman.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a retired mailman with a valuable tip for your readers. If you have something important or irreplaceable to mail, such as legal documents, pictures or film to be developed, take it to the post office and mail it INSIDE the building.

Why? Because in the summer, the inside of that corner mailbox on the street can get as hot as 140 degrees, which can foul up film. In the winter, some of those mailboxes leak like sieves.

Years ago, when I was on collections, I'd bring mail in from some corner boxes that was soaking wet and stuck together — just one big glob. The ink had run on the envelopes, and some of the addresses weren't even legible.

(Beware of the mailbox with the big, heavy lock hanging in front. They are the worst offenders for getting mail wet!)

Another thing: Some juvenile delinquents will buy a popsicle, eat half of it and throw the rest into a mailbox, and you know what a melted, sticky popsicle can do to the mail!

If my letter makes your column, just sign me—READER

DEAR READER: It'll make the column all right.

And it may even make the mailbox on the corner obsolete.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In the great majority of deals that are played in a trump suit, declarer, as soon as he obtains the lead, makes haste to gather in the defenders' trumps. But there are certain types of deals where it is rather apparent that the immediate playing of trumps is wrong. Today's deal falls into this latter category. It came up during the 1975 Summer National Championships held in Miami Beach this past August.

♦ 9 5

SOUTH
♠ J 10 9 7 4
♥ A K Q J 9 7
♦ A 7

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♦.

Technically speaking, North's raise to four spades was an overbid. Having responded with two clubs initially, he guaranteed a minimum of ten points for his two-over-one response in a new suit. A raise to just three spades would have done full justice to his hand.

After West's opening diamond lead had been captured by South's ace, it was rather obvious that the playing of trumps had to be deferred, for if they were played, declarer would lose a trump and a diamond trick. Declarer, of course, was faced with the immediate problem of disposing of his diamond loser before touching the trump suit. He gave it a bit of thought — and came up with the winning solution.

He cashed the ace and king of hearts, after which he ruffed a low heart with dummy's king of spades. Then came the king of clubs, which East covered with the ace. South, quite naturally, ruffed the ace. Another low heart was now led and ruffed with the board's queen of trumps. On the high queen of clubs South discarded his seven of diamonds.

Now, at long last, a trump was led, South's jack being taken by West's ace. West came back with a diamond, which South ruffed. His jack and ten of trumps were then cashed, picking up West's two remaining pieces. With nothing but heart winners remaining in his hand, South now claimed his contract.

Admittedly, when South played his ace and king of hearts at tricks two and three, there was the risk that the second heart lead might have been trumped. But any alternative line of play — like playing trumps — would have led to certain defeat.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Astrological Forecast for Friday, Oct. 17

ARIES (March 21-April 19): What you seek is probably hidden in an "obvious place". Answers to questions are available. Key is to know when to ask. Attend meeting called by "organization representative." Gemini, Virgo persons figure prominently. Take notes.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): One who "wines and dines" you might have unseen motive. Be mature enough to know that you get nothing for nothing. Candy or flowers could arrive to commemorate an anniversary. Remember recent resolutions, including those affecting diet and general health.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): If you expect perfection at the top, you could be in for rude awakening. If you search for absolutes, you could wind up on dead-end street. Key now is to do your best, to aim toward goal without expecting authority figures to be without flaw.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): If you attempt to reform people, you could be asking for trouble. One who is impractical may not be ready for change. Present alternatives without being "bossy." Long-range project requires more organization. You'll see!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Know when to "let go." Realize when transaction—or relationship has reached conclusion. Money, as it affects you through partner, mate, could be spotlighted. Reject the superficial. Remove layers of pretense.

VIRGO (Aug.23-Sept. 22): You draw to you independent inventive people. Know it and plan accordingly. Means don't attempt to force your views. Leo, Aquarius could be involved. Emphasis on getting to heart of matters, finding out where you stand, where you are going and who's paying the freight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Pace slows. You get chance for second emotional wind. Take advantage of respite—prepare, consolidate. Deal with Cancer, Capricorn individuals. Keep appointments, especially those involved with your well being. That "digestive problem" may not be serious but should not be ignored.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent on creativity, willingness to stand up for personal principles. Member of opposite sex pays meaningful compliment. Be appreciative, but don't start kicking toe in sand. Expand horizons; be versatile and display sense of humor.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Direct confrontation is featured. Key is frankness, awareness of basic factors. If you do your "homework" there are rewards. Build on solid structure. Eschew the flimsy, the make-believe, the second-hand and the cut-rate. Adhere to quality.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Movement, messages and visitors are featured. Gemini, Virgo could figure prominently. Highlight flexibility. Show that you are capable of putting ideas into action. Use available material. Be analytical enough to discover reasons and to reject superficial explanations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You learn truth about costs, so-called bargains, home improvements. Taurus, Libra individuals figure in picture. Be diplomatic. You are going to have requests fulfilled. Don't upset emotional apple-cart.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Cycle is such that you will know when you walk into room. Your efforts pay dividends. You get at truth and you will know what to do about it. You receive credit for effort you almost had forgotten.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are intense, creative, dynamic, can be ruthless, passionate and willing to fight when the cause is right. Capricorn, Cancer persons play key roles in your life. Major domestic adjustment occurs in November. You are embarking on cycle of change, creativity and travel. Restrictions are about to be lifted.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Fred fumbled in his pockets. "I don't have my little book," he said. "But that's an easy number to remember."

"Sure," agreed Andy. "If you add it to the sum of its two digits you get just three times the product of its digits."

Victorian Wows Regina

Victorian Timothy Vernon's debut as conductor of the Regina Symphony this month was hailed by critic Andrew Kozma in the Leader-Post as "a total victory."

Vernon was appointed music director and conductor at Regina last spring following auditions of several well-known applicants.

Guest artist for the first concert was Canadian soprano Anna Chornodolska who will also be appearing with Victoria Symphony in February.

There was a capacity attendance for the season's first concert and the mood of expectation at the outset had grown into one of intense enthusiasm by the end of the evening, according to press reports.

"He (Vernon) won the hearts of the audience at the very first minute of his appearance," says Kozma. "His baton technique was expedient and impressive, powerful without being showy.

"At all times he was fully in charge of the orchestra which had one of its best nights ever."

The program was in part a tribute to Vienna where Vernon spent several years as a star pupil of the great Hans Swarowsky. The rest consisted principally of operatic arias and overtures, the latter including Beethoven's Egmont, Rossini's L'Italiana in Algeria and Strauss' Fledermaus.

Concerning the Saskatchewan Centre of the Arts, home of the Regina Symphony, Vernon said in an interview: "The centre is absolutely of international standard. The acoustics are second to none . . . they are on the same level with those of the Golden Hall at the Musikverein in Vienna, the home of the Vienna Philharmonic."

With regard to the orchestra, Vernon is quoted as saying, "Its potential is overwhelming. It's just on the brink of snowballing . . . I'm thrilled at the thought of being instrumental in its growth."

Although frequently referred to as Vancouver-born, Vernon's development and his musical education until he went to Vienna, was all acquired in Victoria. His first conducting tuition was taken with former Victoria Symphony conductor Otto-Werner Mueller who is now principal conductor at Yale University.

ONE-MAN THEATRE

Nation-wide attention has been accorded monodramatist-playwright David Watmough since he settled in Vancouver in 1960.

His brand of one-man theatre and his mood-filled writings have generated more than 500 performances in the last six years, brought him three Canada Council grants and an ACTRA award nomination on three occasions.

He has published collections of plays and stories and has recorded three of his monodramas for Kanata Records of Toronto under the title, Pictures from a Dying Landscape.

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m., Watmough will present programs of his monodramas at Open Space. Thursday's and Friday's progams will be entirely different.

Born in England of long Cornish ancestry, Watmough's mono-dramas are mainly set in Cornwall and delivered in a distinct Celtic lilt.

For the past 15 years, he has been a regular contributor to CBC radio and TV where several of his monodramas were first aired.

Music Teaching Workshop Slated Saturday, Sunday

A piano pedagogy workshop will be sponsored by the Victoria branch of the B.C. Registered Music Teachers' association, Friday, Saturday and Sunday at St. Matthias Church Hall, Richmond and Richardson.

Instructor will be Willard Schultz, associate professor of music and co-ordinator of piano at the University of Calgary.

Recently returned from a six-month sabbatical in New York, London and Germany, Schultz spent much time observing many different kinds of teaching in schools, universities and private studios.

The workshop will open with an examination of the psychology of teaching at all levels, Friday from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. Student repertoire and a performing class will occupy Saturday from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m., and discussion, performance and the teaching of selected 20th century compositions will take place from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Sunday afternoon, starting at 1 p.m., will be devoted to the teachers' repertoire and performing class. Only teachers may attend this session.

Concert At Oak Bay

First of this season's in-school concerts by Victoria Symphony Orchestra took place today at Oak Bay Senior Secondary.

Maestro Laszlo Gati conducted two separate concerts — at 1 p.m. and 2:15 p.m. Impact of live symphony music played in the school environment has been considerable in past seasons and performances have won high praise from principlas, staff and students.

The free concerts are made available through the financial support of the Leon and Thea Koerner Foundation and Xerox of Canada Ltd.

At 108, David Still Believes In Love

TORONTO — David Trumble, 108, has lived under the governments of all of Canada's 15 prime ministers and says he expects to be around for quite a while yet.

"I'm going to live to be 130, and when I die all of me will go up," he says. "I'll be wearing my cap and carrying the cane my grandfather from Ireland gave me, and he lived to be 104."

I've had four wives and 19 children and after a while it's difficult to keep count of who comes after," he says.

Trumble attributes his long life to his enjoyment of romance and says he is a firm believer that love makes the world go round.

"I only ever spent one day in school in my life," he claims. "Somehow I never found the time."

SAN FRANCISCO — A 56-year-old therapist says he's had intercourse with many female patients to help them get rid of hangups and such treatment is a "coming thing" in marital counselling. Prof. Ben Finney of San Jose State University told a disciplinary hearing of the state board of medical examiners that he has treated a dozen women by sex therapy during the past seven years. One woman, he said, was a teacher who paid him $250 a month for three years of treatment, which included intercourse once a week.

SAN FRANCISCO — Sara Jane Moore's cheif legal counsel says he doubts she is competent to help defend herself against charges of trying to murder President Ford. Chief federal public defender James Hewitt Wednesday said he talked with Miss Moore for three hours at the metropolitan correctional centre in San Diego. "I have my doubts that she can make the sophisticated decisions necessary in a complex case of this nature," he said.

DETROIT — The son of missing former Teamsters boss James Hoffa says he answered his telephone several days after his father's disappearance and heard a man's voice say, "you're next." However, James P. Hoffa denied a report in the Detroit News Wednesday which said that he told the FBI he thought the call came from Charles O'Brien, the elder Hoffa's self-described foster son.

WREXHAM, Wales — Gareth Jones and his second wife, Lynn, were happy to be moving into a town council-owned house, until they recently found out their next-door neighbor was Jones' first wife. An exasperated Jones said the situation is embarrassing. "You'd think the council would have more sense," he said.

LOS ANGELES — Movie producer Hal Wallis has sued for $1.5 million Wednesday by Claire Huffaker, a top writer of Western stories, over the movie Rooster Cogburn. Huffaker contended the just-released movie, a sequel to True Grit, "utilized and embodies the ideas and concepts advanced" by Huffaker in conversations with Wallis. In a superior court suit, the writer said he was not given credit, nor paid, for his ideas.

Fats Loses Cue

HOUSTON (UPI) — Willie Mosconi, look out. Minnesota Fats has felt the hard stare and experienced the solemn, methodic shooting of the newcomer.

John Jones stepped to the brown felt pool table and stroked the nine-ball in the corner, 10-ball in the corner, 11-ball one rail to the side, 15-ball down the rail to the corner, 14-ball cut into the corner, 13-ball in the side, 12-ball off the end rail and missed the corner.

Your shot, Fats.

The man who says he's never lost an important money game in his life shook his head in amazement and promptly missed a one-rail shot on the one-ball. The crowd went "ooh."

Nine-year-old Jones, 1, the Fats, 0.

"Hey, kid, play me one more so I can get even," Fats called to the young hustler whose chin barely clears the edge of the $10,000 table.

Fats continued to stare with a look of incredulity as Jones almost ran the table again, sinking six straight, including what appeared to be an impossible cross-bank on the four. He missed his seventh shot, but won anyway when Fats scratched on the eight-ball.

"What's the sense of you beating me, no one will believe it anyhow," Fats chided, turning to the crowd. "This kid will be great someday. You know why? Because he acts like he doesn't even care."

Asked what weight stick he favored, the young pool shark said: "It doesn't matter. I can use any weight there is." No other comment.

Xaviera Ouster Nearer

OTTAWA — Xaviera Hollander, famed for books about her life as a prostitute, lost a critical round this week in the Supreme Court of Canada in her bid to remain in Canada.

Chief Justice Bora Laskin, reading a brief decision by the full panel of nine judges, said the court was rejecting the "narrow point" raised by Miss Hollander's lawyer, D. K. Laidlaw against a deportation order issued two years ago.

Laidlaw said he now may seek an appeal on compassionate grounds before the immigration appeal board. He did not elaborate on what these grounds may be.

Miss Hollander, a blonde, 32-year-old Dutch citizen, has been living in Toronto since she began court proceedings against the deportation order.

The Things We Pay For . . .

VANCOUVER — A Prince Edward Island man has arrived here, armed with a $2,500 Canada Council grant given him to aid his efforts to sabotage a United Nations conference.

Robin Esmonde-White, 29, says he received the grant for an assignment called Project Shabitage.

"It's a mixture of the words habitat and sabotage," he said.

Habitat is the UN conference on human settlements to be held here next June. He says the aim of his project is to give him a chance to ensure that the major issues facing society are discussed at Habitat.

Esmonde-White says that Habitat is on the wrong track because its planners are assuming that the world will still have adequate energy supplies 25 years from now.

"All the habitat wants to do is present a nice, clean conference to the world," he said.

A sociology graduate from Ottawa's Carleton University, Esmonde-White, says he will attempt to make his presence known "by talking to the people." He plans a series of public lectures starting Nov. 12.

Esmonde-White, whose last job was running a health food and cheese shop in P.E.I., says he considers himself an intellectual for whom the federal funds of the Canada Council are a natural means of support.

"As an intellectual I need time for thinking and reading and the Canada Council is designed for people whose ideas are too different for the regular agencies to handle," he said.

The Project Shabitage grant wasn't Esmonde-White's first. He received a $3,600 grant last year to write a text book on the "future society," but was unable to complete it because of the vastness of the subject.

When asked of Esmonde-White, a Habitat official said: "I've never heard of him."

Esmonde-White declined to have his picture taken for a local newspaper.

"I haven't had a chance yet to get my hair done properly," he said.

Before The Judge

A Victoria man will spend four months in jail for being impaired while in the care and control of a car and refusing to take a breathalizer test.

Norman Alan Robinson, 33, of 1442 Camosun, was sentenced Wednesday by Judge William Ostler who put him on a year's probation and grounded him for 18 months.

Robinson has a record of five drinking and driving convictions.

Judge Harold Alder refused the Crown suggestion of a $10 fine per fish, saying the act was deliberate and showed why commercial fishermen resent sports fishermen who don't help conserve fish.

Ernest Falconer, 42, of Victoria, was sentenced to one month consecutive to a sentence he is serving when he pleaded guilty to being unlawfully at large Oct. 14.

Saanich police arrested him after he escaped from Wilkinson Road jail where he was serving a six-month sentence ending Jan. 4, 1976.

The sentence was for theft over $200 and possession of a restricted weapon.

Prosecutor Nick Lang called his record "colorful and lenghty," stretching from 1961 to 1975 and including bigamy, armed robbery, break-in, impaired driving and contributing to juvenile delinquency.

Stephen Michael Trim, 17, of 3702 Duke Rd., was remanded for pre-sentence report after changing his plea to guilty for making a threatening phone call.

The youth had called Dunsmuir Junior Secondary, 3341 Painter, and told a staff member: "There's a bomb in your school. You're going to be blown to bits."

Trim will appear again Nov. 5.

Ilija Culo, 39, Royal Olympic Hotel, was sentenced to one day and given three months-probation when found guilty of theft under $200.

Randy Kevin Peter Stauffer, 29, of 2810 Graham, was ordered to stand trial in a higher court charge of break-in and theft following a preliminary hearing before Judge Fred Green.

The incident occurred April 26 at Wellburn's, 1058 Pandora, where Stauffer was arrested at 3 a.m. after allegedly stealing $84.95 of meat and cigarettes.

★ ★ ★

A woman whose lawyer wanted to change her plea to not guilty on a fraud charge received an absolute discharge by Judge Aller.

Milko Prsa, 46, of 811 Hereward, was charged after a Sept. 24 incident at Eaton's when she switched jackets on a record she wanted to buy.

Her lawyer contended she had no intention of defraud, but left the guilty plea when Alder said he would go along with the pre-sentence report's suggestion for a discharge.

Nels Arthur Debodt Rosenland, 37, of 1220 Goldstream, was fined $200 and ordered to pay back $17.80 to Western Foods where he stole groceries. He was found guilty.

★ ★ ★

In traffic court, Lewis Laverne Nelson, 44, of 885 Craigflower, was fined $250 for ciminally negligent driving.

Fines for impaired driving went to Torben Sorensen, 25, of 2730 Graham, $300; Lillian Joyce Smith, 25 of 932 Stelly's Crossroad, $200; and Ronald Bailey, 47, of 4131 Birtles Ave., $400.

Allan Roy Flynn, 25, of 5155 Beckton, was fined $150 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Experiments Stretch Garden Life

The potential of any garden is not discovered until the gardener experiments. In fact, gardening is a life-long experiment spent in search of answers that cannot be obtained elsewhere.

Some gardeners believe and would like others to believe, that gardening finishes at the end of September. While these gardeners happily close the door, others are working on a project to determine just how long gardening can be continued in their particular location.

The main interest this year is to find out how late vegetable crops can be sown and what, if any, will grow to the production stage before the New Year. One gardener is experimenting with roughly made coldframes, another with the glass cloches so popular in the early 1950's. These people are exploring the possibilities, and will profit by the answers.

Observation is the experimenter's greatest asset. Many strange things happen in a garden, some of which we could use to advantage. Observing these happenings gives the lead to an experiment.

In 1931, I moved from Vancouver to an established garden in the Fairfield district and found pea vines thrown in heap.

Many pods, left on the vines, had split and spilled their seed, and the seedlings were two inches high on Feb. 25. These plants produced the earliest crop I had grown up to that date.

To duplicate this I tried sowing in November one year, January the next year, always with loose protection over the rows, but neither sowing was successful. Why should self-sown seed forge ahead when deliberate sowings fail? Is it because we bury the seed instead of scattering on the surface?

Another year, cleaning up the garden on a wet November day, I cut off the dead pea vines at ground level instead of pulling up the roots.

Someone had told me the roots were rich in nitrogen which would be returned to the soil as they rotted. But they didn't rot; they sprouted two shoots to a root.

The same year, on the advice of a Beach Drive gardener, I planted some small potatoes in November, to have an early spring crop. The peas and potatoes grew well, and we celebrated May 24 with new potatoes and green peas. Nowhere else have I been able to duplicate his experiment.

That growth does not cease with the end of September is evident on the compost pile. Here we find the strangest plants thriving and defying frosts, cold spells and snow. Again these are self-sown volunteers.

In a small box containing tea-leaves, coffee grounds, and vegetable wastes from the kitchen, a cucurbit plant appeared in late January. It continued to grow despite snow, frosts, and cold spells, and was finally transplanted to the garden. To our amazement it produced water melons.

Tomato plants often appear in the compost heap by March and some have endured 10 degrees of frost. These have given fruit in June, whereas indoor raised plants could not be set out until the end of May.

Do these plants survive because the compost heap is well drained and accumulates a certain amount of warmth?

Could we get the same results with sown seeds if we made raised beds of coarse composted material covered with old pea or bean vines? Are we actually losing some three months of growth because we persist in sowing in a cold wet soil.

Observing these strange happenings leads to experimenting. Heat loving squash, we discovered, do far better on a compost heap than in the open garden.

No two gardens will respond in the same way, but until we experiment we have no idea of a garden's potentials, whether it has a six-month season or 12-month.

Maybe an experiment started now will show how much we have missed in the years that have passed.

Gravel Pit Man In Race

He has been fighting for most of this year over a plan concerning removal of some gravel from Polson's gravel pit and relocation of other material in the pit to return the land to agricultural use.

A claim to have the consent of the land commission for his reclamation project has been denied by council.

It claims the pit is zoned "rural" and gravel extraction is not a permitted use.

Gillespie, who filed nomination papers Wednesday, said five B.C. municipalities have already formed their own real estate development companies.

"Such a company works for the benefit of the municipality and land owners — not for some individual land promoter," he said.

The candidate said he also favored a regulatory licensing fee of 25 cents for every yard of gravel moved out of Central Saanich pits.

He observed that other B.C. municipalities have imposed licence fees on gravel.

Gillespie also want Central Saanich to appoint two public defenders to protect people whose rights may be threatned by legislation passed by all levels of governments.

He also said there should be better relations between taxpayers and council.

Economy Bounces

WASHINGTON (UPI) — White House officials say the U.S. economy grew at a rate of about 10 per cent during the last three months in a sharp rebound from the recession.

Industry Report Pleases Builders

VANCOUVER (CP) — Construction industry and trade union officials have reacted favorably to the first report on the construction industry released Tuesday by Jim Kinnaird, former associate deputy labor minister.

Chuck McVeigh, president of Construction Labor Relations Association, said Wednesday that he was not dissatisfied with the report.

"It is a step in the right direction," said MacVeigh. "For a first report I am relatively satisfied."

He said CLRA will now try to work with Kinnaird and the building trades unions to try and make the report work. He said he has reservations about some aspects of the report, such as accreditation and construction industry bargaining.

Cy Stairs of the B.C. Yokon Building and Construction Trades Council said it was a bold report. Stairs said it is well articulated and documented and provides "food for thought."

"Some elements are innovative and present a direct challenge to the traditional thinking on both sides of the industry," he said.

Stairs also said there are points that need clarification and there are others that will be unpalatable to various sections.

One of the major recommendations is that fragmentation in the industry should be avoided and that all construction unions should affiliate with the Building Trades Council.

Naked Body Likely Poet

VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP said Wednesday they were 90 per cent certain the naked body of a woman found about 30 miles north of there is that of missing city poet Pat Lowther.

Mrs. Lowther, 40, disappeared from her Vancouver home Sept. 24. The badly-decomposed body was found Tuesday by a sports fisherman in Furry Creek, near Britannia Beach on Howe Sound.

An autopsy showed the woman died of a fractured skull. It was estimated she had been dead for two or three weeks.

Mrs. Lowther was reported missing Oct. 3. She was living on Mayne Island with her husband Roy and two children.

City's Unions Set to Fight

The provincial and federal legislation of the past two weeks has taught Canada's labor movement that it must get involved in politics, Victoria Labor Council was told Wednesday.

Ernie Knott, delegate from the International Woodworkers of America, said labor has been numbed by the speed and depth of the two-level government attack: "Barrett orders us back to work and Trudeau tells us how much we can get."

Knott said the only way to fight such an attack on labor's rights was to get involved in politics at every level, "not on the coat-tails of any political party" but in an alliance of progressive groups such as labor and tenants.

Last week's provincial back-to-work legislation seemed upstaged by this week's federal wage and price control legislation, which caught most of the fury of the labor delegates.

Stan Darlington, head of the Victoria local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said labor is still in a state of shock at the federal legislation, but it must mount some form of offensive.

"You can call it a price and wage review board, but all they're going to review is labor," Darlington said.

If the legislation was equitable, "I would say yes," Darlington said, but it has no intention of controlling other aspects of the economy, only labor.

"And if a free working man cannot bargain for the results of his labor, where the hell are you going to be?"

Knott said monopolies in Canada are attempting to impose long-term, cheap agreements on unions and it is "significant that the IWA got a two-year contract at a fairly low rate."

Bill 146, the back-to-work order, Knott said, shocked the nation and "drew the support and applause of every right-winger in the country."

The delegates unanimously passed a resolution opposing the federal legislation; urging the Canadian Labor Congress to oppose it and to pursue the anti-inflation program adopted by the labor body last spring.

The program included funding for massive housing development, a new national energy policy which would see the Alberta tar sands developed, and the reduction of taxes and increase of exemptions to the working class.

Council delegates also voted to get involved in the municipal elections in November and pledged "generous financial support" for any labor candidate who would run for civic office.

Labor Council and carpenters' union president John Schibli said he would urge his union to pledge a $1 per capita to support fund for a labor candidate.

Murder-Suicide Intended, Court Told

Ivy Marie Long intended to kill her husband and then commit suicide, a Victoria doctor testified Wednesday in B.C. Supreme Court.

Dr. Glen Ashmead, an emergency room physician at Royal Jubilee hospital, said he treated Mrs. Long and her husband, Warren John "Buzz" Long, shortly after a shooting at the couple's home at 3841 Epsom on May 11.

Ashmead said Mrs. Long told him she had taken one hundred 222s, 10 to 15 valium tablets, three demerol pills and a couple of drinks of rum about half an hour before the shooting. He said the quantity of drugs would have been lethal if she had not vomitted or been treated.

He said she told him she had been depressed for two to three weeks and mentioned she had been thinking of suicide but didn't have the courage.

"I asked her how she had been thinking of doing it and she said on medications," Ashmead told the eight men and four women on the jury. "She also said she had been thinking of killing her husband two to three days prior to taking the medications."

Ashmead said it was his opinion she intended to kill her husband and also intended to commite suicide.

"She was remorseful at being unsuccessful at both," he said.

He described her condition at the time as drowsy, her speech was slurred and he felt she was intoxicated. However, he added, she appeared to understand what was being said to her and judged her response to his questions as appropriate.

Lional and Deanna Green of 3839 Epsom, who have lived next door to the Longs for 19 years, said they were awakened shortly before midnight by someone baning on the front door.

Mrs. Green said she heard her name being called and that when she opened the door Long was standing on the top landing clad in his pyjamas and holding a gun in his hand. Mrs. Long was at the bottom of the stairs leaning over a wrought-iron railing and crying.

Green said Long entered the house saying "I've bee nshot . . . I've been shot . . . Marie shot me."

He said he took Long into the kitchen, sat him down at a table and put the gun aside. He said Long's back was bleeding.

Green said Long insited he (Green) go to the house to get his wallet . . . "before Marie gets it."

Green said he left, first hiding the gun in another room and then went next door finding Long's bedroom "by smell of gunsmoke."

When he returned and placed the wallet on the kitchen table Long's only comment was "Thank God", Green said.

Meanwhile Mrs. Green said she took Mrs. Long into a bedroom.

"She was crying the whole time and asked for a drink of water as she had an awful taste in her mouth."

Mrs. Green said Mrs. Long told her between sobs that "Buzz" had said "uncomplimentary things" to her, that she couldn't remember loading the gun and that she "didn't shoot him bad."

She said Mrs. Long was groggy, sleepy, drowsy, kept her eyes.

Mrs. Green said she had to keep prodding Mrs. Long to keep her talking and said her speech was incoherent and full of contradictions.

"Her statements didn't make sense," she said. "She didn't deny shooting Buzz but added 'I hope I didn't hurt him'. In another instance she said 'I should have killed him'. And another she said 'I hope he'll be all right!"

Saanich police detectives Sgt. Frank Briers and Cpl. William Hillcoat testified they arrived at the Green's house about 11:45 p.m. and interviewed Mrs. Long in the bedroom after, first asking Mrs. Green and a Saanich police constable to leave.

Briers said he asked Mrs. Long if she shot her husband and she replied "Yes."

He said he then asked her if she intended to kill her husband and she said, "Yes, I did."

He said he asked her if she was under a doctor's care and she responded by saying she was and went on to tell him about the drugs she had taken. An ambulance was then summoned to take her to hospital.

Briers said the conversation lasted about 10 minutes and during the time Mrs. Long appeared upset. He said she was crying, her eyes were red and cheeks puffy.

Under cross-examination by defence lawyer Ken Murphy, Briers maintained that although Mrs. Long seemed "slightly drowsy" she was alert and comprehended everything said to her.

Briers said he hadn't made up his mind about the charge he would lay when he first went into the room.

"All I knew was that Long had been shot and Mrs. Long did it. But we didn't have time to lay the charge then."

He said when he left the room Mrs. Long was sitting upright on the bed.

However, Mrs. Green testified that she went in as soon as the detectives left and found Mrs. Long sprawled crossways on the bed apparently asleep and had to nudge and shake her.

"She was like a robot," Mrs. Green said. "I helped her sit up. She didn't speak or answer me. She appeared dazed."

Briers said he and Hillcoat went to Royal Jubilee at 2:45 a.m. May 12 and there formally arrested Mrs. Long on the charge of attempted murder.

Saanich Constable Robert Love, a firearm's expert, testified the gun used was a .303 Savage semi-automatic rifle. He said he found one live round of ammunition on the kitchen table in the Green's residence and another round on the bedroom dresser in Long's house.

Under questioning by Murphy, Love said an inexperienced person, unfamiliar with guns would have had difficulty using the rifle.

The trial continues today, with the prosecution expected to close its case this morning

Rent Boost Limit Cut

British Columbia's 10.6 per cent limit on rent increases is too high and will likeley be lowered next year, Attorney General Alex Macdonald said today.

A report, expected next week, will recommend a more flexible system for rent controls with a standard allowable increase lower than the existing 10.6 per cent, he said.

Macdonald would not say what the new allowable increase will be but he expects it will be lower than the rent control guidelines set out in the federal government anti-inflation program.

The minister called reporters into his office this morning to tell them in response to the federal wage and price control program, B.C. would continue its own rent controls and its own jurisdiction over energy prices.

Meanwhile, federal Finance Minister Donald Macdonald warned that if B.C. premier Dave Barrett rejects the terms of the new anti-inflation act "the people of B.C. would be adversely affected." Following a morning cabinet session, in Ottawa, he indicated the government is still willing to make changes in the plan and the provinces will have a chance to suggest amendments at a federal-provincial finance ministers meeting next week. Alex Macdonald said, his government's effort to keep down gasoline prices have saved British Columbians $12 to $15 million and he doesn't foresee allowing any further increases in gasoline prices in the near future.

Recent increases in the wellhead prices of natural gas, established by the B.C. Energy Board, are necessary as incentives to production in the north, said the attorney-general, so he does not expect the federal government will interfere in those increases.

B.C.'s system of requiring prior government approval for any increases in the prices of petroleum products will continue and is a better program than the federal governments' new scheme.

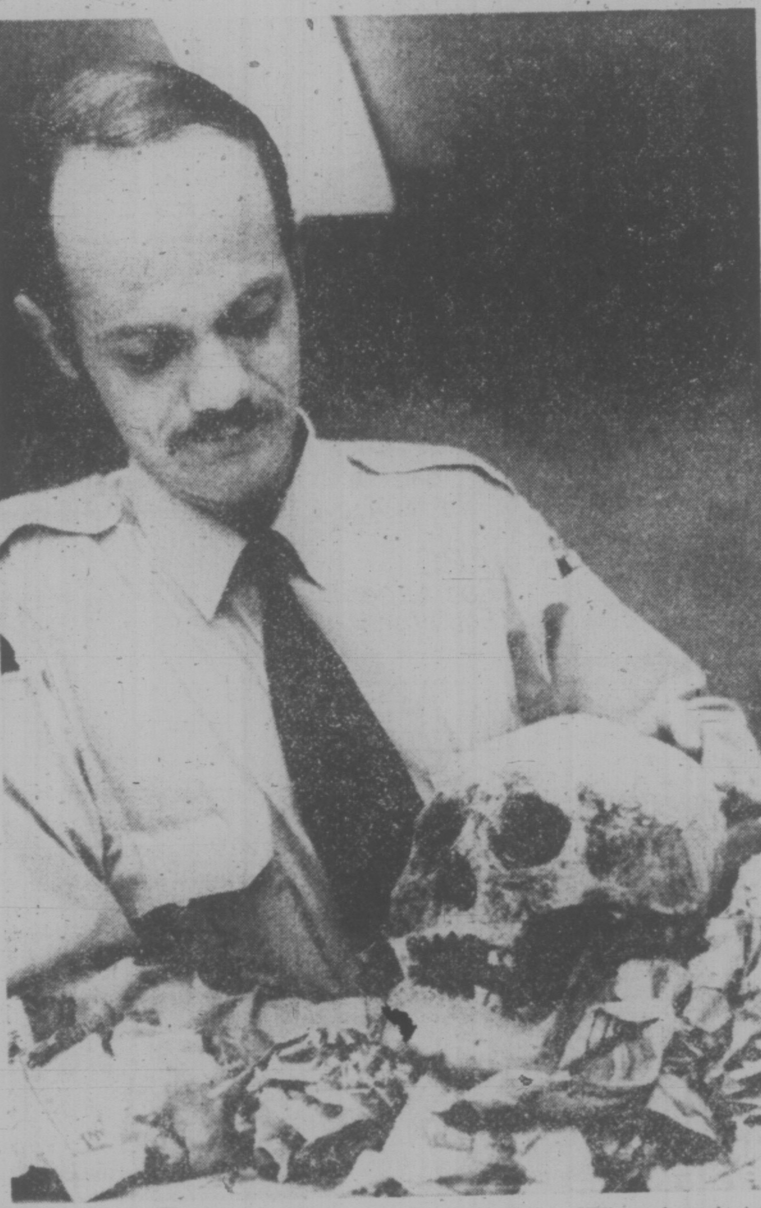
Ottawa's program allows prices to rise and then calls for a review and possible roll backs which are difficult to enforce, he added.

A report is also being prepared on the possibility of provincial controls on the mark-up of gasoline at the retail or dealer level, but the government has no plans now to go beyond controlling wholesale prices of gas.

$212B BILL

OTTAWA (CP) — Cost of keeping consumers supplied with oil, natural gas, coal and electricity is expected to total $212 billion during the next 15 years, the federal energy department says.

Provision of additional electricity through nuclear plants, thermal-generating stations and hydroelectric projects probably will cost $110.9 billion, more than half the total spending.



POST OFFICE driver J. J. Shannon stopped at the McNeil and St. Patrick mailbox in Oak Bay at 11:30 a.m. Wednesday and found a cardboard box sitting nearby with a newspaper-wrapped skull inside. Oak Bay police have determined from UVic anthropologists that skull is likely Kwakiutl or Nootka and is about 150 to 200 years old. Cranium, held here by Cst. Bill Irwin, will be turned over to provincial archives. (Bill Halkett photo.)

Posties Sticking To 71% Demand

Times News Services

OTTAWA — A postal strike appeared inevitable today as leaders of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) announced plans to stick with their original demand for a 71-per-cent pay increase in a one-year contract.

Backed by apparently overwhelming support from the 22,000 CUPW members for a postal strike if negotiations fail, chief union negotiator Jean-Claude Parrot said he will attempt to return to the bargaining table "to get on with some real neogtiations this time." But if those negotiations fail, "there is no doubt we will have to use our right to strike."

Parrot's comments came after most CUPW locals voted heavily in support of the union executive's request for authority to call a walkout, if negotiators fail to make progress on the CUPW's initial demands.

"There have been no real negotiations up to now because the employers did not have any mandate," Parrot said.

He was referring to a July 8 internal memo between two post office negotiators with a list of items which are identified as negotiable or non-negotiable.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Wednesday that the anti-inflation review board must approve any post office contract settlements exceeding new federal wage guides.

The government's selective wage controls imposed earlier this week limit annual increases to a basic 10 per cent in the first year of a contract for more than four million workers, although the anti-inflation board is empowered to make exceptions in some cases.

The union has demanded a wage increase of 71 per cent over one year. It has rejected an increase of 38 per cent over 30 months as proposed in a conciliation board report and supported by Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey. If accepted, the recommendation would raise average hourly rates to $6.28 from $4.58 and add protection against increases in the cost of living.

The union's demand for an increase of 71 per cent would mean an hourly increase of $3.26 over one year.

Airline Seeking Order

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Air Canada will seek a court injunction against a planned one-day strike by members of the Canadian Airline Pilots Association.

The nation-wide walkout, set for Saturday, was organized to protest the federal government's policy of permitting bilingual air traffic control at five Quebec airports.

An Air Canada spokesman said purpose of the injunction is to avoid massive public inconvenience.

"We fail to see how the cause of safety could be advanced by the proposed strike. We also believe that the dispute shoull not be settled with a strike," Yves Pratte, Air Canada chairman.

In a related development, one airline has said it will dismiss any of its 149 pilots who take part in Saturday's walkout.

Jack Hughes, vice-president of Nordair, said the airline warned CAPLA in a letter that any pilots who refuse to operate scheduled flights during the 24-hour walkout will be dismissed immediately.

In the letter, Nordair president R. G. Lefrancois called the walkout "irresponsible and illegal, and unnecessarily disruptive to our charter services."

Lefrancois also said CALPA would be responsible for any expenses incurred by Nordair as a result of the walkout.

Supermarket Prices Raised, MP Charges

Times News Service

OTTAWA — Supermarkets in Ontario and B.C. have raised their prices to anticipate wage increases that will not materialize because of the wage freeze, an NDP MP charged in the House of Commons Wednesday.

Stuart Leggatt (NDP—New Westminster) observed that the anti-inflation policy provides for refunds to purchasers who have been gouged, but asked Finance Minister Donald Macdonald how these purchasers will be identified so they may get refunds.

"In other words," Leggatt asked, "how do you refund the price of a can of beans to people who have been gouged?"

The finance minister admitted there will be "a very considerable problem in that there are a great many articles of small value exchanging hands over a period of time." He said that every effort will be made to identify these entitled to refunds.

"But in that kind of situation, where the purchaser cannot be identified, the amount of overcharging will then be forwarded to the Crown," Macdonald added.

They said, however, the alterations had been decided last Thursday and were not because of Trudeau's speech.

Marilyn Chilvers, of Canada Safeway Ltd., said some of the chain's stores had regular night crews working on Monday. She said they were stocking shelves and altering prices to those decided last Thursday for the opening of business this week.

She said prices on 82 items increased and those on 181 declined.

Shirley Brown, of Super Valu, said the reasons for price changes at that chain were similar to those of Safeway.

"Our prices are controlled at head office and there would be no one here (when the speech was made) to issue that kind of order," she said.

B.C. Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich said today it's "very unlikely" the cabinet will decide before next week whether to launch an inquiry into food costs in B.C.

The agenda for cabinet's special meeting in Parksville Saturday will not leave room for discussion of a possible inquiry, he said, and it may be

Nixon Was Odd —Henry

Special to The Times

OTTAWA — The private table talk of Henry Kissinger reveals that the U.S. Secretary of State found Richard Nixon to be an "odd, artificial and unpleasant man."

Kissinger's comments, made at a private banquet held in his honor by External Affairs Minister Alan MacEachen, were picked up by a microphone that was to be used to transmit his after-dinner toast to reporters in another room.

The sound was accidentally turned on throughout the meal.

His former boss "barely governed" during the 18 months of the unfolding Watergate scandal which eventually forced him to resign, Kissinger said.

Kissinger had nice words for the Kennedy family, especially Jacqueline Onassis whom he said he likes and finds "sexy."

"Jackie is a hard woman who knows what she wants," Kissinger said.

Nixon, on the other hand; "was a very artificial man.

"In the sense that when he met somebody, he thought it out very carefully, so nothing was spontaneous. He didn't enjoy meeting people and people sensed it. And that made them uncomfortable.

"What I have never understood is how he became a politician. He really dislikes people. He hated to meet new people."

Kissinger also said that Nixon could never win over the hearts of Americans because he came across poorly on television.

Back-to-Work Law Broken By Bakery, Board Rules

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Labor Relations Board ruled Wednesday that McGavin Toastmaster Ltd. contravened the provincial government's back-to-work legislation by failing to recall all union workers employed at its Mother Hubbard Bakery in Langley, near here.

The decision will also affect pulp and paper mills.

Paul Weiler, the board chairman, issued an interpretive ruling saying he assumed McGavin "will immediately move to comply" with the legislation — the Collective Bargaining Continuation Act — that last week ended four major labor disputes, including the Greater Vancouver food shutdown, for a 90-day cooling off period.

Weiler said in a written judgment he has not issued a formal order to this effect, but would do so if the Bakery and Confectionary Workers International Union, Local 468, formally applied for one.

Weiler's interpretation of the intent of the emergency legislation passed at a special session of the legislature was expected to affect other unions' complaints besides the bakery.

Pulp and paper unions ordered to end their three-month strike have made similar complaints regarding rehiring at some pulp and paper mills.

About 700 members of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada employed at the Canadian Cellulose Ltd. in Prince Rupert and 400 at the Rayonier plant at Woodfibre on Howe Sound have not been called back to work.

B.C. Rail has issued layoff notices, effective Friday, for 150 men in two shopcraft locals of the United Transportation Union.

The dispute over rehiring at the Langley Bakery led to a workers' sit-in Friday and Saturday, which was called off pending the board decision.

While ruling that McGavin contravened the emergency act, Weiler also said that the company could not be prevented from later laying off employees "for just and reasonable clause."

He said that the intent of the legislation was not just that a strike or lockout be ended.

"Instead the operations must be resumed to their original scope and extent; each of the employees must be called back to work; and all employees must resume the duties of their employment," said Weiler.

Couth? . . . Not Bloomin' Likely!

DURHAM, England (Reuter) — Every British citizen has the right to swear at a policeman and slam the door in his face, a judge ruled Wednesday.

The decision followed an appeal by Robert Bennett who swore and slammed the door on a policeman when he was asked to take his son to a police station.

Overturning a $10 magistrate's fine for obstructing a policeman in the execution of his duty, the judge said: "It seems to us this man was doing nothing more than exercising his British rights with characteristic British vulgarity."

Don't Talk, Just Smile . . . to Sell Social Credit

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Don't talk a lot but smile and look happy — that's the advice Social Credit head offices are giving their door-to-door canvassers.

The memo, which appears to have been prepared several months ago, first advises the canvasser not to talk a lot. They should begin by offering a Socred brochure and asking the homeowner what he thinks of the provincial government.

"If they are socialists, they'll say they like the NDP and are satisfied with it. If so, don't argue, just say you appreciate their time and hope they'll read over your folder — and thanks a lot — go to next door."

But the response is more likely to be negative, said the memo, and the canvasser should then talk about his concern over the NDP and say:

"I want to ask you to join me — in the best investment you'll ever make — $5 for a four-year investment in freedom."

The memo is full of tips on how and when to canvass and on what to say when met with certain responses.

"Please greet everyone with a smile, and look happy. It's great to be Social Credit!!"

Canvassers are given a hint of what to say if asked what freedoms B.C. has lost under the NDP — "If you own a car, you no longer have freedom of choice — freedon to purchase your insurance from someone other than the government.

"If you own land, — you no longer have personal jurisdiction over than land. Many British Columbians are even being forced into bankruptcy because they cannot sell their land, their land is not productive, and they cannot borrow on their land."

The NDP is "the most inflationary government in Canada," said the memo and Premier Barrett has a salary of $52,000 plus $18,000 expenses, some of this tax free."

(Barrett actually has $20,000 in expenses but it is to cover travel expenses of his office).

The memo urges canvassers not to start before 9:30 a.m. or after 9 p.m. and says security-sealed aprtments may be difficult to get into — "but if you reach the owner and explain you are on a mission for free enterprise, you'll get a good reception."

As a final note the directions say in some polls canvassers will find retail shops, industries and offices.

"Ask to see the manager and explain your cause.

"It is important that we call on everyone."

Back-to-Work Law Broken

He said it was not difficult to fathom the reason for the government's approach to the problem of controlling the major labor disputes.

Weiler said the legislation "is admittedly draconian" and said it removed from the unions for 90 days their main weapon for influencing employers when negotiations are at an impasse — the strike.

"The legislature concluded that the employers should not be given a discretion as to the pace at which they might reasonably resume operations and as to how many employees they felt they needed to use," Weiler said.

Only by sending all employees back to work "would there be clear and unmistakable evidence that the original labor-management dispute and work stoppage had been ended."

The company told the board it did not call back all employees "because its regular customers had stock-piled supplies from elsewhere as a consequence of the strike."

Weiler rejected the company's argument that the act be given a "broad interpretation in order to allow an employer to make these reasonable, economic judgments in deciding on the pace at which operations should be resumed under the legislation."

Members of the bakers union, the meatcutters division of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers Union and the Retail Clerks Union closed 125 area supermarkets for a month before the legislation ordered them back to work.

The workers have rejected an increase of $1.30 an hour over terms ranging between 10 and 11½ months that would increase wages for general clerks to $7.25 an hour, meatcutters to $7.95 and bakers to $8.14.

Supermarket Price Hike

best to wait until after a meeting of finance minister's in Ottawa next week for clarification of the federal anti-inflation program.

Among other factors the cabinet will have to consider is a study of food costs already in progress by the B.C. Food Advisory Council.

Stupich said he has not seen the study which was prepared by a hired consultant and investigates the cost of food once it leaves the farm.

But a preliminary draft has been studied by department officials and the minister said it might make a further inquiry redundant.

The report, which should be completed by November, might also indicate where a more full scale inquiry with public hearings might probe.

Stupich repeated that the government has made no decision on whether a price review would be helpful and said again that the province may not have any power to act on its findings.

The main concern in proposing the study, he said, is that "we always hear that food prices are higher in B.C. than elsewhere and even if it just reassures us, maybe it's necessary."

"I've been trying to justify prices in the past, now perhaps we need more evidence."

In related developments—Treasury Board President Jean Chretien will issue directives prohibiting the use of first class air travel by federal public servants, suspending the normal schedule for replacement of departmental automobiles and ending the normal replacement of office furniture.

—Special phone numbers have been set aside for complaints or questions about the program at revenue department taxation offices in 28 major cities. Long-distance calls can be made free of charge by dialing the operator and asking for Zenith 0-4000.

—Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp said Wednesday the government may amend legislation designed to limit medical care cost increases to bring it in line with its new economic program.

—Employees in Calgary's essential services will strike if wage and price guidelines laid down by the federal government have not been withdrawn by Jan. 2. Jim Murrie, western regional director of the Canadian Union of Public Employees said Wednesday.

Murrie said following a meeting of Calgary CUPE members that the union intends to enlist support provincially and nationally to "break the guidelines wherever possible."

—Finance Minister Macdonald will introduce a bill in the Commons today authorizing the government to move ahead with its new anti-inflation program.

Debate is scheduled to open Friday. Commons rules restrict bills to routine first reading on the day of introduction.

—Jean-Luc Pepin, chairman of the anti-inflation review board, said at a press conference the plan needs voluntary support to make it work.

"If people don't want it to work, there will be 111 ways of getting around it," he said.

Asked about the negative union response, he suggested that it was "possibly a standard reaction—a bargaining position—but they will come around to saying 'yes'."

Basically, what the unions are being asked to accept is a 10 per cent ceiling on wage rises in th first year of a three-year program, which includes two per cent as a share in national productivity growth. Increases of six and four per cent before maximum two per cent productivity gains would be permitted in the next two years.

OTTAWA (CP) — A government move to tighten unemployment insurance eligibility may become even more severe, the Commons was told Wednesday.

Manpower Minister Robert Andras, replying to Lincoln Alexander (PC — Hamilton West), said a review is under way that may bring more changes.

Government House Leader Mitchell Sharp said a bill introduced earlier this year to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act now has priority as part of the anti-inflation program.

He told Gordon Fairweather (PC — Fundy-Royal) the government hopes to bring it through Parliament along with wage and price control legislation to be introduced today.

"There is a very high priority for the bill" Sharp said. Alexander noted that benefits paid in July were 60 per cent higher than for the same month in 1974. He asked whether Andras is considering relating the time a person actually works to the time for collection of benefits.

"When a decision is made I will place the information before the House." Andras said.

Viet Holding Camp Folds

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (UPI) — Marines are striking the tents in "Little Saigon," first and biggest of the Vietnamese refugee camps, which is closing down after housing almost 50,000 Vietnamese.

Some still without sponsors, face being sent to another camp in Arkansas, a prospect that has caused tensions to rise, provoking fistfights and depression among those facing more time in limbo.

Few persons can be seen on the road linking several of the main camps, thronged only a few months ago with Vietnamese looking for friends and relatives in other camps.

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Almost 200 years after he set sail in 1776 on his third and last voyage of exploration, which landed him on the west coast of Vancouver Island, Captain James Cook is coming back to B.C. — suffering the indignities of air freight.

A "heroic-scale" statue of the famous explorer, navigator and hydrographer is now being made in England and should be ready for air delivery by the end of November.

But Mayor Peter Pollen, who commissioned the work, said today he still doesn't know who will pay the estimated $10,000 cost, or exactly where Capt. Cook will take his prominent stand in the city.

"If I found out who was going to pay for these things before I did anything else, half the time they would never be ordered," he commented.

But the mayor obviously isn't too worried on that score. He said the provinical beautification agency, the Capital Improvement District Commission, has already recommended that the provincial government foot the bill.

And if the government doesn't, there are always private trusts, foundations, donations from public-spirited citizens or indeed city council."

City archivist Ainslie Helmcken, whose determined detective work enabled the commissioning, said the eight-foot, six-inch figure will be made of a type of "ersatz" bronze which looks like bronze and is extremely durable.

The figure is an exact replica of the Cook memorial in his home town of Whitby, Yorkshire, where Cook was apprenticed to a shipowner in 1746 nine years before he joined the Royal Navy, and where his famous ships Endeavour, Resolution, Adventure and Discovery were built.

Helmcken said it was fortunate that at the time he contacted the appropriate local authority, Scarborough council, for permission to have the copy made, it was already considering a similar request from the state of Alaska.

The original sculptor of the Whitby figure more than 100 years ago was Sir John Tweed, of the Royal Academy, and the man who will be making the copies is Surrey artist Derek Freeborn.

The material used, said the archivist, is a mixture of bonze powder and resin, reinforced with fibreglass. It's called polybronze, and Freeborn has given an assurance that the finished product "will be at least as strong as foundry-cast bronze."

Actual cost of the work will be around $7,000, and on top there will be air freight expenses and the cost of erecting a suitable base for the statue's first and last resting place.

Asked where that might be, Pollen quipped: "Initially we thought he might stand on the shoulders of Capt. Vancouver on top of the legislative buildings, symbolizing the way this government tramples all over everyone."

But the mayor said not only would that be historically inappropriate — Cook never roamed that far south in these waters — but also, perhaps, a "rather obscure part of the city" to erect such an important monument.

A more likely location, Pollen said, might be the "niche" in the Upper Causeway promenade. But if the alcove is chosen, care will be taken not to interfere with the commemorative maritime plaques already in place there.

"I think we should be ever mindful of the fact that, but for what these great men did, we wouldn't be here today."

We'll Take Our Medicine If It Promises a Cure

Item: More tha na little bemused these past few days by the reactions to events that featured Peter Pollen, Dave Barrett and Pierre Trudeau.

I heard nothing but praise for Mayor Pollen whose reaction to a typically stupid, brutal, hockey game was a direct confrontation with the coach of the local team. I don't think for a minute that it will restore semi-professional or professional hockey to a fast, clean game, but the mayor, there in his official capacity, took the direct action that every sensible man or woman who has watched these games in the flesh or on the tube has felt like duplicating at some time or other.

There was all but unanimous praise, too, for Premier Barrett's decree to get the plants open and the men back to work for a cooling-off period. It can be argued persuasively, as many union leaders argued, that such legislation takes away the rights of collective bargaining from the labor movement, but, on reflection, it seemed immaterial in view of the fact that talk, itself, was getting nowhere. In any event the reaction seemed overwhelmingly that Davey had done the right thing.

These unrelated incidents seemed at least circumstantial evidence that there's a hunger for direct action, that the public will accept the strongest of medicines when the motivation is spontaneous or genuine. As it was in the Pollen episode so the Barrett move seemed a minor triumph in identification.

That seemed even truer in the television speech given by Prime Minister Trudeau. In watching it with a room-full of people of varying political hues and in sampling the later reaction I had the strong feeling that there was a terrible letdown of anti-climax. People were prepared, even ready to welcome, some hard action. When it came out as a compromise with the emphasis on voluntary restraints it seemed a weakness in a country that's eager to accept government strength.

Item: To watching tonight (Sunday) a high-budget Toronto series called Side-Street, my god-child being a member of the cast and very good in his role, but it does make you wonder what the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation is using for brains or a sensibility to the public taste.

This is just an awful show, a carbon-copy of the worst American-made violence programs, badly conceived, badly directed. This particular episode was called "Rape" and was both embarrassingly explicit and pointless in its dramatics.

You would think, being limited to the offerings of Channel Six, Victoria, that you might get used to this crap—they run Barretta, Ironside, Policewoman, Cannon, Hawaii Five-O and any other violence shows they can get their hands on—but the disgust only grows.

It was Channel Six, by the way, which passed up a preview of the Upstairs, Downstairs program which it will be running. Channel Two, Vancouver, carried this advance look at the highly-touted series, but Channel Six elected to give us Policewoman.

Item: Mighty pleased to read today in The Province—of all papers—a tribute to Bob Strachan who is leaving the hurly-burly of politics for the more serene pastures of London as our agent-general there.

I have known Bob through the 23 years of his public life, most of them in the role of a battling opposition that would discourage any lesser man, and, again, through those years when he set up the auto insurance plan and ran the ferries, both plagued by strikes that came from the kind of union people whose cause he had espoused for so long.

He has never been anything less than a courageous and dedicated man who deserves our thanks and gratitude.

Item: Driving today from Nanaimo to Victoria with a man I much admire, yet we hadn't gone more than two miles before I realized that he is one of the world's worst drivers.

What frightened me most was the sudden realization that, while I go along supremely confident in the ability of the guy who is coming at me, it might very well be this guy, that the only hope for him is a safe-driving course and that he has no intention whatever of ever taking one.

$3.2M For X-Ray Equipment

It is going to cost $3.2 million to bring x-ray equipment at Victoria's two general hospitals up to standard over the next five years.

But the provincial government will provide 75 per cent of equipment costs and 60 per cent for renovations if it endorses the program approved by the Regional Hospital and Health Planning Commission Wednesday night.

The program would see $1,299,000 spent on radiology at Royal Jubilee Hospital and $1,899,00 at Victoria General Hospital.

John Clark, regional hospital planner, told the commission that technical committees are unanimous about updating of radiology at the hospitals being a matter of ugency.

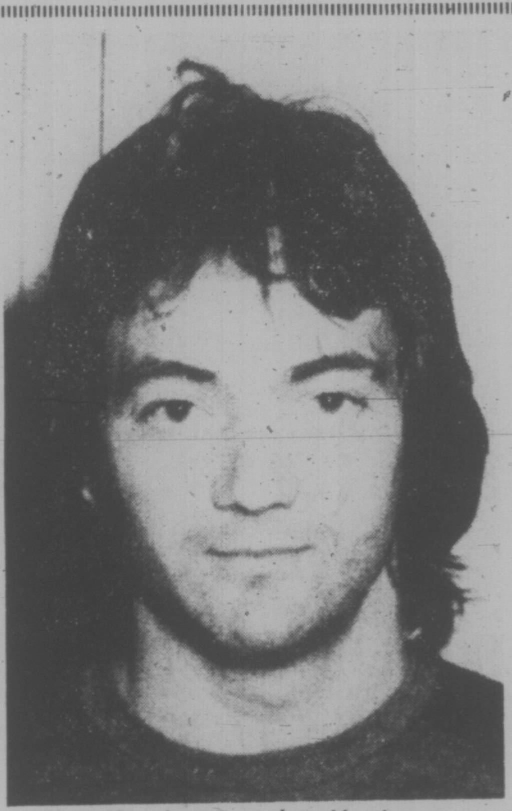
In other business, the commission approved a master plan for development of both general hospitals, one more step which will ultimately see a co-ordinated construction program to renovate and expand them.

The master plan refines the roles each hospital has been assigned, set out in an earlier study.



Gordon Douglas Martin

Elusive Escaper Seen But Still On Loose

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Escaped prisoner Gordon Douglas Martin, seen twice since making a run early Wednesday from Wilkinson Road correction centre, was still at large today despite a wet night in the bush and a police dragnet.

Residents of the area northwest of the jail were warned to stay indoors and be wary of strangers until 23-year-old Martin, who has a history of violence, is recaptured.

Both sightings were by the same person, Mrs. Kay O'Connor, 1460 Charlton, who spotted the escaper first as she was driving on Charlton an hour after Martin escaped at 8:10 a.m. Wednesday.

"I couldn't believe it when I saw him again this morning," she said.

This time the man was walking briskly along the edge of Hastings heading north, about one-third of a mile from where she saw him Wednesday.

"He turned and looked at me and I said, 'It's him again. I think he may have recognized me."

The man apparently had been holed up during overnight rainfall. His green institutional trousers were dry although mudcaked, Mrs. O'Connor said.

He had discarded his green shirt before she saw him on Carlton Wednesday morning, but overnight had acquired a too-large ski-type quilted jacket, blue in color.

"He was walking as fast as he could possibly walk, just off the edge of the road," the woman said.

That was about 10 minutes before 9 as Mrs. O'Connor returned from driving her children to school.

Only a few minutes earlier, she had speculated the fugitive had "been in that bush all night," indicating the rough undergrowth visible from her living room window.

She said there is an unoccupied house on the other side of the bush area where Martin could have been. There are also other houses an numerous farm outbuidings in the Granville-Charlton-Courtland area west of Interurban Road where police concentrated their search.

Heavy rain this morning hampered the work of RCMP tracking dog Aro, which followed up on Wednesday's search after Mrs. O'Connor reported seeing the escaper.

Police also used a helicopter to scan the fields and bush and had police cars spotted at commanding locations in a three square miles area.

The police dog found Martin's shirt off the end of Roy Road Wednesday afternoon, but there were no further positive leads until this morning, although there was a report Wednesday night of a man fitting Martin's description in the Munn Road area near Francis Park.

"Leaving a car with keys in it is just an invitation," Chisholm said.

Martin is five feet, 11 inches tall, 160-170 pounds with ear-length light brown hair and brown eyes. He was to have appeared at Ladysmith today for preliminary hearing into charges of burglary and possession of stolen property.

MAN CHARGED AFTER CHASE

A 19-year-old Esquimalt man who led police on a high-speed chase which ended in an Oak Bay crash early today has been charged with three counts including criminal negligence and impaired driving.

John Mark Rogers, of 885 Dunsmuir was charged after Victoria city police pursued a vehicle at speeds up to 90 mph for two miles.

He was scheduled to appear in court today.

Rogers and passenger Jay Dancey, 18, of 1286 Holloway in Saanich, were treated for cuts and bruises and released from Royal Jubilee Hospital after the 1965 Mustang in which the two were riding sideswiped a tree at Orchard and Newport.

The chase began downtown near Pandora at 12:30 a.m.

Police pursued the car the wrong way down one-way Pandora then along Fort to Oak Bay Avenue to Newport.

Fourth Attempt By Heynsbroek

Victoria's tally of aldermanic candidates for the Nov. 15 municipal election rose to five Wednesday with the announcement by former contestant, Joyce Heynsbroek, that she will make her fourth bid for a seat on city council.

Mrs. Heynsbroek, a working nurse for 25 years, with five children, was defeated in two previous elections and one byelection. Last year she unsuccessfully sought election as a school trustee on the Greater Victoria school board.

Born in England, she came to Canada in 1960 and is a Canadian citizen.

In the five years she has lived in Victoria she says she has been actively involved in community life, and lists among her special interests, education, drug abuse and care of the aged.

Mrs. Heynsbroek said if elected to council she would like to help in special initiatives on housing, through all three levels of government.

"Housing is needed at all levels but where the pinch is felt most, of course, is at the low-income level."

She added that she has "no big quarrels" with the general direction taken by city council in recent years, but feels she can make a useful contribution.

Trustee 'Shilly-Shallying' Irks Parents

Greater Victoria school board officials today were accused of "shilly-shallying" on the future of Lampson street elementary school.

A parent spokesman, one of 50 who attended a lengthy meeting of the board's construction committee Wednesday, said parents will register their complaints at a press conference Saturday at the school and make it clear the school should remain open and funds spent to maintain it.

Una Collins said is has taken constant effort on the part of parents to have the school maintained "and it was only two or three years ago parents managed to get doors put on the boys' washrooms."

Crux of the issue is whether the board should cut off registration of new students next year, redirecting them to neighboring schools, or go ahead with additions to the school and maintenance.

Another proposal being considered is to have Lampson made a primary school with only Grades 1 to 3.

The meeting saw two trustees in favor of maintaining the school, one against expenditure of funds for maintenance and addition, and six undecided. Mrs. Collins said the meeting proved a reluctance on the part of the board to come to terms with the issue.

Trustees decided to delay a decision until additional information on population projections in the area — reported dropping by the administration, and increasing by the parents — is received.

Tenders on the $311,000 addition planned for a gymnasium change rooms and administration area will be opened today and provide the board with more information on which to base a decision, trustees decided.

Assistant board superintendent Dr. John Wiens said today a decision on whether to cancel tenders for the addition must be made within 15 days. It is expected the issue could come up at Monday night's board meeting.

Bids opend today were described by Wiens as much higher than expected.

Lowest base bid for addition and renovation of the building was submitted by Herb Bate Ltd. at $679,970. Other bids were from Hunter Construction at $697,324 and H E Fawler and Sons at $759,504.

Bids did not include extensive prices quoted for improvements to lighting, fire alarms and electrical systems.

They will be referred to the school board for consideration.

Q. Where is the property of the Nimpkish Band, on or west of Cormorant Island? Where is Cormorant Island? I have a postcard that shows the upper part of what is printed as the highest totem pole in the world, 173 feet. Is there not another higher totem pole in the Royal Ontario (or other famed) museum? — J.R.

A. The Nimpkish Band has several small reserves on Cormorant Island, as well as reserves along the Nimpkish River on Vancouver Island. Cormorant Island is a small island off the north-east coast of Vancouver Island. The world's highest totem pole is the 173-foot pole at Alert Bay on Cormorant Island. The pole, raised June 7, 1973, is 13 feet higher than the previous record holder in McKinleyville, California.

Wrestled for Rifle After Wounding, Court Told

Warren John "Buzz' Long testified before a B.C. Supreme Court jury today that his wife entered his room shortly after he went to bed May 11 and shot him.

Long said his wife, Ivy Marie, opened his bedroom door, flipped on a light, swung a sporting rifle towards him and simultaneously fired it.

Mrs. Long, a 48-year-old mother of three and married to her husband for 26 years, has been charged with attempted murder. Her trial before Mr. Justice Davie Fulton started Tuesday. (See earlier story on Page 43.)

Long said he was shocked by the shot, got out of bed and rushed across the hallway to another bedroom where he saw his wife attempting to reload the rifle.

He said he wrestled the gun out of her hands, shook the ammunition out of it and went into the kitchen area to phone for police.

While attempting to dial, he said, his wife grabbed hold of the receiver and tore the phone off the wall.

He said he took the rifle and went out a basement door, through the garage to a neighbor's place to summon help.

Long said that earlier in the day he had gone to Vancouver to visit his mother and had arrived home shortly after 11 p.m. He said when he arrived home, his wife was sitting in the living room watching television and that after a while, he noticed she was "sobbing heavily."

She didn't say anything, he testified, and he watched television for about a half hour and then went to bed.

He said his wife had told him then she had found interest in someone else. The affair carried on until December, 1973, he said, when the man she was going with left her.

Long admitted that during the same period he was going with the other man's wife and that divorce proceedings had been started by both parties.

He said that from the summer of 1974 his marriage had deteriorated and that since January of this year he started spending weekends at the other woman's place.

He and his wife wanted a friendly settlement and she agreed to the divorce and wanted to remain in their home at 3841 Epsom until she could make other arrangements.

In testimony heard Wednesday Dr. Glen Ashmead said he had treated both Mrs. Long and her husband at the emergency ward at Royal Jubilee early in the morning of May 12.

Industrial Issues Losing Ground

Industrial issues continued to lose ground in light mid-afternoon trading on the Toronto stock market today but base metals and western oils made moderate gains.

Analysts said negative reaction to the federal government's control package was driving stocks down despite broad advances on Wall Street.

The industrial index was off .59 to 175.44. Golds rose .98 to 303.64, base metals .25 to 73.98 and western oils .40 to 189.58.

New York

The stock market posted a broad gain today, encouraged by a new sign of a more stimulative monetary policy at the U.S. federal reserve board.

Trading was fairly active.

Late Wednesday, the reserve board announced it was lowering to one per cent from three per cent the amount of reserves member banks must hold to support time deposits.

Such a move has the effect of freeing additional funds for use in the banking system and that, in theory, tends to push interest rates down and stimulate economic activity.

Interest rates in both the bond and short-term money markets registered declines today.

Eastman Kodak rose 2⅛ to $102⅝ on the 14-per-cent third-quarter earnings gain reported by the company at the close Wednesday.

Higher quarterly profits also benefited Honeywell, up 1 at $32⅞, and Munsingwear, 1⅜ higher at $14⅞.

Xerox, which listed a nine-per-cent decline in quarterly earnings from continuing operations, lost 1⅛ to $60⅝.

Montreal

Prices were mixed and generally lower in moderate trading today on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Volume at 2:30 p.m. EDT was 372,100 shares compared with 423,100 shares traded at the same time Wednesday.

Alberta Gas Trunk Line fell ⅛ to $11, Algoma Steel ⅜ to $29⅝, International Nickel A 3 to $25¼ and Home Oil A ⅛ to $26⅞. Bell Canada rose ⅜ to $42⅛, Velcro Industries ⅛ to $7⅜ and Alcan Aluminium ⅛ to $20⅞.

EARLY GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Oilseeds and rye picked up strength and feed grains hovered near previous close levels in moderate trading at the close today on the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange.

Rapeseed was the strongest grain on the board with increases of as much as 13½ cents. Feed grains were mixed.

Wednesday's volume of trade was 1,817,000 bushels of barley, 1,188,000 of rapeseed, 983,000 or rye, 927,000 of oats, 339,000 of feed wheat, 135,000 of flax and nil of Montreal corn.

Fireplace No Longer Luxury

TORONTO (CP) — The once lowly fireplace has become a star overnight, says Sam McCullough, 42, general manager of Selkirk Metalbestos, one of the largest fireplace manufacturers in Canada.

"The fireplace market in Canada is less than a decade old," he said in an interview. "Yet in this short span of time, it has grown from a meagre beginning to become a major industry on the Canadain building and renovation scene."

Selkirik, which has plants in the Ontario centre of Brockville, Oshawa and Toronto, has forecast sales next year of $11 million compared with $5 million four years ago.

McCullough said the energy crisis has been a boon for his firm because people began buying fireplaces as an alternative heating unit against fuel shortages. It means that a fireplace is no longer a luxury, but a necessary "functional heating unit."

McCullough's own firm has helped make fireplaces more popular with its new, prefabricated, self-contained units that use a steel rather than a masonry-built chimeny. He said steel chimneys are more efficient, more easily installed and less costly.

Selkirk's share of the fireplace market has grown 500 per cent in the last three years in competition with three Canadian and five United States manufacturers.

Selkirk-made and designed fireplaces also are sold in Europe and Australia.

The company moved into Australia only this year and did $80,000 worth of business in a joint venture with Morgan Heating and Cooling Ltd of Melbourne.

"They (Morgan) feel that within five years, we can build up a $2-million market in Australia," McCullough said.

Under the deal with Morgan, the company will make a profit on parts it ships to Australia and "we'll get six per cent in royalities on everything they make under licence from us.

Selkirk will provide its foreign markets with parts as it has the precision tooling to do the job more efficiently and at less cost.

Eight of Wallace Murray's plants are in Canada, five in Ontario.

The parent U.S. firm also owns and operates the Simonds cutting tool plants at Avrida and Granby in Quebec, and the Schwitzer plant in Stratford, Ont.

Grainmen Fined

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — One of the world's largest grain dealers, Bunge Corp. of New York, was fined $10,000 after pleading no contest to a charge of conspiring to steal grain from customers. The government had charged Bunge with cheating foreign buyers of vast amounts of grain during 12 years of short-weighting at the firm's grain elevators in Destrehan, La., and Galveston, Tex.

Japan Trade Deficit First in 17 Years

TOKYO (Reuter) — Japan had a foreign-trade deficit of $1.018 billion during the first half of this fiscal year, with both exports and imports down on 1974—the first such decline in 17 years—preliminary figures show.

The trade deficit was smaller than the $3.605 billion in the corresponding six months of 1974, because imports fell faster than exports, said the finance ministry's figures covering April to September.

Exports totalled $27.415 billion, a decline of 4.4 per cent from $28.689 billion a year ago, while imports amounted to $28.433 billion, a drop of 12 per cent from $32.295 billion.

Exports to the United States, the European Common Market countries and Latin America declined heavily but those to the Middle East and Communist countries increased.

Imports from all areas dropped, but the decline was particularly heavy in imports from the Common Market and Southeast Asia.

Pulp Workers Will Ask A Better Deal Than IWA

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada will press for a better contract than the one tentatively agreed to by the International Woodworkers of America, PPWC president Reg Ginn said Wednesday.

He said he had talked with Finance Minister Donald Macdonald, who indicated the union would not be bound by wage and price guidelines brought down Monday by the Federal government.

"We will be pressing for negotiations in a week or so," said Ginn. "But it is ridiculous that we get a similar settlement with the IWA."

There is no comparison between the two unions except "that we both use logs," Ginn said.

"It's like trying to compare an industry that makes lines for railways and one that makes pots and pans," he said. The only similar things is that the primary product comes from a mine."

Art Gruntman of the Canadian Paperworkers Union said it looks as if his union will be exempt from the federal regulations. He has not had any discussions with federal officials, he said.

He agreed with Ginn that the IWA settlement should have no bearing on negotiations for the pulp workers.

"We would like to bargain our own agreement and not have someone else do it for us," he said.

Spokesmen for British Columbia's largest forest and pulp and paper companies, meanwhile, said Wednesday that new stocks of products are being produced and most operations will begin shipping them to buyers by the weekend.

The forest and pulp and paper industries which provide 50 cents of every $1 for the B.C. economy were crippled from July 16 to Oct. 9 due to the effects of a pulp workers' strike and economic layoffs.

Almost a week after the legislation came into effect both industry and union spokesmen agree that compliance with the law generally has been good and most workers have been recalled.

Jack Morris, a spokesman for Crofn Zellerbach, said "with minor exceptions almost everyone is back to work and operations are at pre-strike levels."

He said by the end of the week shipments to fill initial orders would be sent out.

"In considering the production and supply situations you have to consider the demand situation as well," said Morris.

Most of the injured were treatel for stab wounds. Three inmates were sent to surgery at Mercer Medical Centre in critical condition with multiple stab wounds in the chest and stomach.

Electronic Squabble Halts Province Press

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Province published only one edition today, instead of the usual two, after a dispute with printers over technological change was resolved.

Copies of the morning newspaper were not off the presses until shortly before 7 a.m. about five hours after the second edition usually goes to press.

Officials of Pacific Press Ltd., which produces The Province and The Sun, met with members of the International Typographical Union and Ed Peck, labor relations board vice-chairman, and reached an agreement about 3 a.m.

Members of the ITU downed tools Wednesday after the composing room foreman fired a printer for refusing to handle copy from new electronic equipment.

In a front-page note to readers, publisher Paddy Sherman said that the company considers the work stoppage an illegal strike.

Sherman said that under the contract, which expires at midnight Oct. 31, "subject to stringent job safeguards, we have the right to introduce new printing technology."

"After preparation and discussions with the union dating back to February, the first article went live through the new video-display terminals late Wednesday," said Sherman's note.

"A printer refused to handle the finished material, and was dismissed, the only action possible under our contract language. Other printers immediately stopped working."

Sherman said that as a result of the discussions, "the printer was reinstated, work resumed, and the union agreed to handle the material earlier refused."

During discussions, other employees used the video-display terminals, which set tape by using a computer, "to prepare pages in cold type instead of the hot metal that has been used traditionally for setting news copy."

Sherman said The Province plans to be in full operation for Friday's edtion.

Union officials could not be reached for comment.

Greater Powers For CMHC Chief

OTTAWA (CP) — The Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. and the urban affairs department are being reorganized with CMHC president William Teron gaining greater authority.

An aide to Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson confirmed Wednesday that Teron will become acting secretary equivalent to deputy minister of the urban affairs department while James MacNeill is commissioner-general of the United Nations conference on human settlements.

MacNeill will oversee preparations for the July, 1976, conference to be in Vancouver.

Teron, 42, will retain responsibility for CMHC but Ray Hession, CMHC executive vice-president, will become administrative head of the Crown corporation, the minister's aide said.

The CMHC president, a former house builder, will remain chairman of the corporation's executive committee, a policy-making body.

But day-to-day operations will be handled by Hession, a 35-year-old computer data expert who joined CMHC as executive-director of data and systems in April, 1974.

Teron

Teron, CMHC president since mid-1973, will have more power than MacNeill, whose sole responsibility was for the urban affairs department.

TWO-WAY BATTLE SEEN IN DUNCAN

DUNCAN — The mayoralty race here looks like a two-way battle between restaurant owner Michael Crosbie and incumbent Ken Pashkin when residents go to the polls, Nov. 15. Nominations, however, do not close until noon Oct. 27.

Crosbie, who has been in Duncan for three years, said his platform would stress the need for light industry in the Duncan area.

In the aldermanic race, for the first time in the community's 60-year history, a woman will run for council.

Mrs. Dorothy Sellars, a legal secretary and nine-year resident of Duncan, is going into politics because of the "need for orderly growth and development in the city."

There will be three vacant aldermanic seats, but two of the incumbents, aldermen Michael Coleman and John Homer are seeking re-election.

The third seat will be vacated by Ald. Lorne McLeod, who is not seeking another term.

January Opening For Centre

NANAIMO—The 3.5 million recreation centre, which houses an arena and swimming pool, is scheduled to go into use early in January.

The centre was approved by voters in a Nanaimo district referendum two years ago, after a similar vote had failed some time earlier.

Press Talk Progressing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Negotiations with union paper handlers are going smoothly, but that it's too early to tell if the Washington Post will reach agreements soon with its nine craft unions, executives of the paper said Wednesday.

Negotiations with seven of the unions, which are either striking the paper or observing picket lines, are being handled by the federal mediation and conciliation service in secret.

Talks with the union representing striking photo-engravers were to begin today, while negotiations with the electricians' union began Wednesday.

Negotiations between The Post and pressmen, who started the strikes Oct. 1, were suspended Oct. 9 when the mediator said no progress had been made and both sides had hardened their positions.

The vote by 1,300 editorial and commercial employees, directed the union leadership to call a strike "when and if they see fit." Members of the Guild unit at the New York Times are to take a strike authorization vote today. Contracts between the two papers, the guild and eight craft unions expired last March 30.

Industrial Issues Losing Ground

Industrial issues continued to lose ground in light mid-afternoon trading on the Toronto stock market today but base metals and western oils made moderate gains.

Analysts said negative reaction to the federal government's control package was driving stocks down despite broad advances on Wall Street.

The industrial index was off .59 to 175.44. Golds rose .98 to 303.64, base metals .25 to 73.98 and western oils .40 to 189.58.

Volume by 2 p.m. was 852,000, down from Wednesday. Declines led advances 188 to 125 with 222 issues unchanged.

Canadian Tire A lost ¼ to $43¼, Imasco A 1 to $29¾, Canada Malting A ¾ to $20, Inco B ⅝ to $25⅝ and Woodward Store A ⅝ to $18¼.

General Motors gained 1 to $56, Pacific Pete ½ to $25½, Shell Canada ¼ to $16¼, Slater Walker ⅜ to $9⅝ and Massey-Ferguson ⅛ to $17⅝.

Rio Algom dropped ¾ to $30, Pine Point Mine ⅜ to $30⅛ and Lost River Mining 21 cents to $2.70. Camflo Mines climbed ⅜ to $11 and Dickenson Mines ⅛ to $6¾.

Ranger Oil fell ⅝ to $13⅞, Sunningdale Oil ¼ to $5¼ and 15 cents to $3. Canadian Homestead Oils gained ¼ to $5 and Page Pete 15 cents to $1.70.

New York

The stock market posted a broad gain today, encouraged by a new sign of a more stimulative monetary policy at the U.S. federal reserve board.

Trading was fairly active.

Late Wednesday, the reserve board announced it was lowering to one per cent from three per cent the amount of reserves member banks must hold to support time deposits.

Such a move has the effect of freeing additional funds for use in the banking system and that, in theory, tends to push interest rates down and stimulate economic activity.

Interest rates in both the bond and short-term money markets registered declines today.

Eastman Kodak rose 2⅛ to $102⅜ on the 14-per-cent third-quarter earnings gain reported by the company at the close Wednesday.

Higher quarterly profits also benefited Honeywell, up 1 at $32⅞, and Munsingwear, 1⅜ higher at $14⅞.

Xerox, which listed a nine-per-cent decline in quarterly earnings from continuing operations, lost 1⅛ to $60⅝.

Montreal

Prices were mixed and generally lower in moderate trading today on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Volume at 2:30 p.m. EDT was 372,100 shares compared with 423,100 shares traded at the same time Wednesday.

Alberta Gas Trunk Line fell ⅛ to $11, Algoma Steel ⅜ to $29⅝, International Nickel A 3 to $25¼ and Home Oil A ⅛ to $26⅞. Bell Canada rose ⅜ to $42⅛, Velcro Industries ⅛ to $7⅜ and Alcan Aluminium ⅛ to $20⅞.

London

The Financial Times index was up 5.6 points to 348 in mid-session trading.

Canadian issues were down slightly in extremely light trading.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Oilseeds and rye picked up strength and feed grains hovered near previous close levels in moderate trading at the close today on the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange.

Rapeseed was the strongest grain on the board with increases of as much as 13½ cents. Feed grains were mixed.

Wednesday's volume of trade was 1,817,000 bushels of barley, 1,188,000 of rapeseed, 983,000 or rye, 927,000 of oats, 339,000 of feed wheat, 135,000 of flax and nil of Montreal corn.

CHICAGO (AP) — Farm commodity futures prices whirled up to 12 cents a bushel higher today on the Board of Trade on buying linked to the possibility of new sales to the Soviet Union.

Soybean meal advanced about $2 a ton while oil was up about 75 points, or ¾ cents a pound. Oats gained about 2½ cents and corn nearly 4 while wheat rose 5½ and soybeans 11½.

There was no official word from the Ford administration but the floor buzzed with talk that the Soviet Union had bought 6 to 8.5 million tons of wheat, corn and soybeans. The word also was that this completed Soviet purchases from the United States. There was no mention of a long-term agreement on grains nor of any so-called grain-oil pact.

While longs were ebullient, shorts were very active and demand continued strong from all sides into the final bell. In most pits the closing prices were near or at highs for the session.

Gold futures closed with a gain of $2 an ounce, reflecting a good gain in silver futures and a somewhat smaller rise in the price of spot gold abroad.

At the close, soybeans were 5 to 11½ cents a bushel higher, Nov. 5.37½; wheat 2 to 5½ higher, Dec. 4.09½; corn 2 to 3½ higher, Dec. 2.95 and oats ¼ to 2½ higher, Dec. 1.52½.

Japan Trade Deficit First in 17 Years

TOKYO (Reuter) — Japan had a foreign-trade deficit of $1.018 billion during the first half of this fiscal year, with both exports and imports down on 1974—the first such decline in 17 years—preliminary figures show.

The trade deficit was smaller than the $3.605 billion in the corresponding six months of 1974, because imports fell faster than exports, said the finance ministry's figures covering April to September.

Exports totalled $27.415 billion, a decline of 4.4 per cent from $28.689 billion a year ago, while imports amounted to $28.433 billion, a drop of 12 per cent from $32.295 billion.

Exports to the United States, the European Common Market countries and Latin America declined heavily but those to the Middle East and Communist countries increased.

Imports from all areas dropped, but the decline was particularly heavy in imports from the Common Market and Southeast Asia.

Mercury Pollution Worry Among North Indians

VANCOUVER (CP) — Although the provincial government has been asked to investigate mercury pollution at Pinchi Lake, Indians there say a more immediate problem is posed at Stuart Lake.

Nick Prince, spokesman for the Nescoslie Indian reserve near Fort St. James, said Wednesday that his reserve and Stuart-Trembleur Indians have not fished in Pinchi Lake "for a long time" because they knew it was polluted.

"Indian people reported finding dead fish floating on the lake and in 1968 we got up a petition asking for a biologist to examine the fish but we were ignored," said Prince.

"We tried to bring the situation to the attention of the authorities but the white people wouldn't listen."

Pinchi Lake, about 100 miles northwest of Prince George, drains into Stuart Lake in two places and was once the site of a mercury mine owned by Cominco Ltd.

While Pinchi Lake was once a major fishing area for the reserve, fish camps are gone and no one goes there anymore but Stuart Lake is fished a great deal, Prince said.

"We've been getting worms in the fish from Stuart Lake and we don't know what causes them," said Prince. "It's never been known before in history to find worms in the fish . . . it makes me kind of suspicious."

Ross Peterson, a Vancouver environmental consultant, has called for medical examinations to be made of Indians who ate fish from Pinchi Lake for any length of time.

"We recommended back in 1970 that the whole situation should be explored more fully," said Peterson.

"Now we hear that the mercury levels are even higher and I think medical checks should be made of the Indians."

Peterson said in 1970, he reported mercury levels in Pinchi Lake trout ranged from to to four parts per million.

The level permitted in Canada is .5 parts per million and the World Health Organization recommends an allowable level of .05 parts per million.

Peterson said in that report that the contamination was probably caused by "untreated tailings" dumped into the lake from a mercury mine during the Second World War.

TRUDEAU TO B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau will be the feature attraction at a $100-a-plate fund-raising dinner to be held Nov. 21 at the Hotel Vancouver.

About 1,000 tickets are expected to be sold with proceeds going to federal and provincial Liberal activities in B.C., according to Ralph Brown, chairman of the organizing committee.

Pen Trio Transfer Case Adjourned to Dec. 8

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A provincial government application seeking to reverse a court order holding three British Columbia Penitentiary prisoners at the nearby lower Mainland Regional Correctional Institute was adjourned to Dec. 8, Wednesday in Supreme Court.

Lawyer Tom Fisher, representing the Crown, asked whether Judge Phillip Govan's order concerning the prisoners, held in connection with a June hostage incident at the B.C. Penitentiary, was proper.

The order transferring prisoners Andy Bruce, Dwight Lucas an Clair Wilson from the federal penitentiary to the provincially-run insititute was made after the prisoners claimed they were being abused in the penitentiary.

The case was adjourned after lawyer Jim Hogan, representing Lucas, said he had not received transcripts of the provincial court proceedings.

Hogan said after the court session that Judge Govan had indicated he wanted to be represented by counsel in the proceedings, but that the provincial government would not appoint a lawyer.

In Victoria, lawyer Bob Simpon of the attorney-general's department confirmed that Judge Govan had asked for counsel and that the request had been denied.

Simpson said it was departmental policy that when both sides of an issue were represented by lawyers, no lawyer would be provided a judge.

Simpson said the cases in which a judge is provided with legal counsel are rare and that he could only remember three such cases in the past 11 years.

Brown, Levi Win Re-Nomination

VANCOUVER (CP) — Human Resources Minister Norm Levi and MLA Rosemary Brown easily defeated challenger Ron Johnson on Wednesday to win the New Democratic Party nomination in the two-seat provincial riding of Vancouver-Burrard.

Johnson said he was running because Levi voted for Bill 146.

LABOR BOARD SUED

VANCOUVER (CP) — A trade union has filed a writ in British Columbia Supreme Court which challenges the constitutional authority of the B.C. Labor Relations Board.

Local 580 of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union has asked for an injunction to prevent the labor board from holding further hearings into a lispute involving the union, the Brewery Workers Union and Uncle Ben's Beverages Ltd.

The board began hearings Tuesday on a dispute which concerns the brewery workers' adherence to a B.C. Federation of Labor hot edict placed on all Uncle Ben's products as a result of a strike by the RWDSU at the Uncle Ben's soft drink plant in Richmond, which is controlled by Ben Ginter.

As a result of the hot declaration, the brewery workers have refused to work at Ginter's Prince George brewery — an act he says amounts to an illegal strike.

The RWDSU's writ charges that by proceeding with its hearing, members of the labor board acted "contrary to principles of natural justice and are exercising and are performing duties in contravention of the statutory object and limitation imposed by the Labor Code."

Rent Boost Limit Cut

British Columbia's 10.6 per cent limit on rent increases is too high and will likely be lowered next year, Attorney General Alex Macdonald said today.

A report, expected next week, will recommend a more flexible system for rent controls with a standard allowable increase lower than the existing 10.6 per cent, he said.

Macdonald would not say what the new allowable increase will be but he expects it will be lower than the rent control guidelines set out in the federal government anti-inflation program.

The minister called reporters into his office this morning to tell them in response to the federal wage and price control program, B.C. would continue its own rent controls and its own jurisdiction over energy prices.

Meanwhile, federal Finance Minister Donald Macdonald warned that if B.C. premier Dave Barrett rejects the terms of the new anti-inflation act "the people of B.C. would be adversely affected." Following a morning cabinet session, in Ottawa, he indicated the government is still willing to make changes in the plan and the provinces will have a chance to suggest amendments at a federal-provincial finance ministers meeting next week. Alex Macdonald said his government's effort to keep down gasoline prices have saved British Columbians $12 to $15 million and he doesn't foresee allowing any further increases in gasoline prices in the near future.

Recent increases in the wellhead prices of natural gas, established by the B.C. Energy Board, are necessary as incentives to production in the north, said the attorney-general, so he does not expect the federal government will interfere in those increases.

B.C.'s system of requiring prior government approval for any increases in the prices of petroleum products will continue and is a better program than the federal government's new scheme.

Ottawa's program allows prices to rise and then calls for a review and possible roll backs which are difficult to enforce, he added.

A report is also being prepared on the possibility of provincial controls on the mark-up of gasoline at the retail or dealer level, but the government has no plans now to go beyond controlling wholesale prices of gas.

$212B BILL

OTTAWA (CP) — Cost of keeping consumers supplied with oil, natural gas, coal and electricity is expected to total $212 billion during the next 15 years, the federal energy department says.

Provision of additional electricity through nuclear plants, thermal-generating stations and hydroelectric projects probably will cost $110.9 billion, more than half the total spending.

Oak Bay police have determined from UVic anthropologists that skull is likely Kwakiutl or Nootka and is about 150 to 200 years old. Cranium, held here by Cst. Times News Services

OTTAWA — A postal strike appeared inevitable today as leaders of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) announced plans to stick with their original demand for a 71-per-cent pay increase in a one-year contract.

Backed by apparently overwhelming support from the 22,000 CUPW members for a postal strike if negotiations fail, chief union negotiator Jean-Claude Parrot said he will attempt to return to the bargaining table "to get on with some real neogtiations this time." But if those negotiations fail, "there is no doubt we will have to use our right to strike."

Parrot's comments came after most CUPW locals voted heavily in support of the union executive's request for authority to call a walkout, if negotiators fail to make progress on the CUPW's initial demands.

"There have been no real negotiations up to now because the employers did not have any mandate," Parrot said.

He was referring to a July 8 internal memo between two post office negotiators with a list of items which are identified as negotiable or non-negotiable.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Wednesday that the anti-inflation review board must approve any post office contract settlements exceeding new federal wage guides.

The government's selective wage controls imposed earlier this week limit annual increases to a basic 10 per cent in the first year of a contract for more than four million workers, although the anti-inflation board is empowered to make exceptions in some cases.

The union has demanded a wage increase of 71 per cent over one year. It has rejected an increase of 38 per cent over 30 months as proposed in a conciliation board report and supported by Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey. If accepted, the recommendation would raise average hourly rates to $6.28 from $4.58 and add protection against increases in the cost of living.

The union's demand for an increase of 71 per cent would mean an hourly increase of $3.26 over one year.

Strike Ban Granted

MONTREAL (CP) — A Quebec Superior Court Justice today granted Air Canada an injunction restraining the airline's 1,500 pilots from joining a walkout Saturday with other members of the Canadian Airline Pilots Association (CALPA).

The injunction was granted after Air Canada said the scheduled 24-hour walkout would ground more than 360 of the airline's domestic and international flights.

The walkout by CALPA's 2,900 members is in protest of an experimental bilingual air control program at five Quebec airports. The pilots say the program constitutes a safety hazard.

An Air Canada spokesman said purpose of the injunction is to avoid massive public inconvenience.

"We fail to see how the cause of safety could be advanced by the proposed strike. We also believe that the dispute shoull not be settled with a strike," Yves Pratte, Air Canada chairman,

In a related development, one airline has said it will dismiss any of its 149 pilots who take part in Saturday's walkout.

Jack Hughes, vice-president of Nordair, said the airline warned CALPA in a letter that any pilots who refuse to operate scheduled flights during the 24-hour walkout will be dismissed immediately.

In the letter, Nordair president R. G. Lefrancois called the walkout "irresponsible and illegal, and unnecessarily disruptive to our charter services."

Lefrancois also said CALPA would be responsible for any expenses incurred by Nordair as a result of the walkout.

Jail, Big Fines Back Controls

OTTAWA (CP) — Penalties for violating selected wage and price controls imposed by the government this week include jail terms of up to five years and fines of $10,000 or more, legislation tabled today in the Commons shows.

The legislation establishes the anti-inflation board that is to monitor the guides for acceptable price and income rises and also spells out the cost for offenders.

It says offenders are liable on summary conviction for fines of at least $200 and up to $10,000, or up to a two-year jail term, or both.

On conviction by indictment, offenders are liable to fines set by the court that must be at least $10,000 and imprisonment for five years.

Meanwhile an NDP MLA charged Wednesday supermarkets in Ontario and B.C. have raised their prices to anticipate wage increases that will not materialize because of the wage freeze.

Stuart Leggatt (NDP—New Westminster) observed that the anti-inflation policy provides for refunds to purchasers who have been gouged, but asked Finance Minister Donald Macdonald how these purchasers will be identified so they may get refunds.

"In other words," Leggatt asked, "how do you refund the price of a can of beans to people who have been gouged?"

The finance minister admitted there will be "a very considerable problem in that there are a great many articles of small value exchanging hands over a period of time." He said that every effort will be made to identify those entitled to refunds.

"But in that kind of situation, where the purchaser cannot be identified, the amount of overcharging will then be forwarded to the Crown," Macdonald added.

They said, however, the alterations had been decided last Thursday and were not because of Trudeau's speech.

Marilyn Chilvers, of Canada Safeway Ltd., said some of the chain's stores had regular night crews working on Monday. She said they were stocking shelves and altering

Nixon Was Odd —Henry

Special to The Times

OTTAWA — The private table talk of Henry Kissinger reveals that the U.S. Secretary of State found Richard Nixon to be an "odd, artificial and unpleasant man."

Kissinger's comments, made at a private banquet held in his honor by External Affairs Minister Alan MacEachen, were picked up by a microphone that was to be used to transmit his after-dinner toast to reporters in another room.

The sound was accidentally turned on throughout the meal.

His former boss "barely governed" during the 18 months of the unfolding Watergate scandal which eventually forced him to resign, Kissinger said.

Kissinger had nice words for the Kennedy family, especially Jacqueline Onassis whom he said he likes and finds "sexy."

"Jackie is a hard woman who knows what she wants," Kissinger said.

Nixon, on the other hand, "was a very artificial man.

"In the sense that when he met somebody, he thought it out very carefully, so nothing was spontaneous. He didn't enjoy meeting people and people sensed it. And that made them uncomfortable.

"What I have never understood is how he became a politician. He really dislikes people. He hated to meet new people."

Kissinger also said that Nixon could never win over the hearts of Americans because he came across poorly on television.

Back-to-Work Law Broken By Bakery, Board Rules

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Labor Relations Board ruled Wednesday that McGavin Toastmaster Ltd. contravened the provincial government's back-to-work legislation by failing to recall all union workers employed at its Mother Hubbard Bakery in Langley, near here.

The decision will also affect pulp and paper mills.

Paul Weiler, the board chairman, issued an interpretive ruling saying he assumed McGavin "will immediately move to comply" with the legislation — the Collective Bargaining Continuation Act — that last week ended four major labor disputes, including the Greater Vancouver food shutdown, for a 90-day cooling off period.

Weiler said in a written judgment he has not issued a formal order to this effect, but would do so if the Bakery and Confectionary Workers International Union, Local 468, formally applied for one.

Weiler's interpretation of the intent of the emergency legislation passed at a special session of the legislature was expected to affect other unions' complaints besides the bakery.

Pulp and paper unions ordered to end their three-month strike have made similar complaints regarding rehiring at some pulp and paper mills.

About 700 members of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada employed at the Canadian Cellulose Ltd. in Prince Rupert and 400 at the Rayonier plant at Woodfibre on Howe Sound have not been called back to work.

B.C. Rail has issued layoff notices, effective Friday, for 150 men in two shopcraft locals of the United Transportation Union.

The dispute over rehiring at the Langley Bakery led to a workers' sit-in Friday and Saturday, which was called off pending the board decision.

While ruling that McGavin contravened the emergency act, Weiler also said that the company could not be prevented from later laying off employees "for just and reasonable cause."

He said that the intent of the legislation was not just that a strike or lockout be ended.

"Instead the operations must be resumed to their original scope and extent; each of the employees must be called back to work; and all employees must resume the duties of their employment," said Weiler.

Couth? . . . Not Bloomin' Likely!

DURHAM, England (Reuter) — Every British citizen has the right to swear at a policeman and slam the door in his face, a judge ruled Wednesday.

The decision followed an appeal by Robert Bennett who swore and slammed the door on a policeman when he was asked to take his son to a police station.

Overturning a $10 magistrate's fine for obstructing a policeman in the execution of his duty, the judge said: "It seems to us this man was doing nothing more than exercising his British rights with characteristic British vulgarity."

By LINDA HUGHES

Times Staff

The memo, which appears to have been prepared several months ago, first advises the canvasser not to talk a lot. They should begin by offering a Socred brochure and asking the homeowner what he thinks of the provincial government.

"If they are socialists, they'll say they like the NDP and are satisfied with it. If so, don't argue, just say you appreciate their time and hope they'll read over your folder — and thanks a lot — go to next door."

But the response is more likely to be negative, said the memo, and the canvasser should then talk about his concern over the NDP and say:

"I want to ask you to join me — in the best investment you'll ever make — $5 for a four-year investment in freedom."

The memo is full of tips on how and when to canvass and on what to say when met with certain responses.

"Please greet everyone with a smile. and look happy. It's great to be Social Credit!!"

Canvassers are given a hint of what to say if asked what freedoms B.C. has lost under the NDP — "If you own a car, you no longer have freedom of choice — freedon to purchase your insurance from someone other than the government.

"If you own land, — you no longer have personal jurisdiction over that land. Many British Columbians are even being forced into bankruptcy because they cannot sell their land, their land is not productive, and they cannot borrow on their land."

The NDP is "the most inflationary government in Canada," said the memo and Premier Barrett has a salary of $52,000 plus $18,000 expenses, some of this tax free."

(Barrett actually has $20,000 in expenses but it is to cover travel expenses of his office).

The memo urges canvassers not to start before 9:30 a.m. or after 9 p.m. and says security-sealed apartments may be difficult to get info — "but if you reach the owner and explain you are on a mission for free enterprise, you'll get a good reception."

As a final note the directions say in some polls canvassers will find retail shops, industries and offices.

"Ask to see the manager and explain your cause.

"It is important that we call on everyone."

Most political parties assign workers to be poll captains to canvass all parts of each constituency before any election.
